Facing Two Ways

By William V. Nessly.

The United States acted last night to strengthen materially its Atlantic defenses, as it contemplated the altered world political situation presented by open formation of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo alliance.

Establishment of a new patrol force within the United States fleet, to operate in the Atlantic, was announced by the Navy Department.

Constituting the first concrete step toward creation of a two-ocean Navy, the move will provide a balanced aggregation of 125 battleships, cruisers, destroyers, submarines and auxiliary ships, with planes. The fleet itself will remain in the Pacific.

Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis will command the patrol force.

Australian Cruise Discussed

The announcement fits in with the known determination of the American Government not to let its attention be unduly concentrated on the Pacific while the greater threat from the European totalitarian powers continues as at present.

At the same time, there was renewed discussion of a proposed good-will naval cruise through the Pacific to Australia and New Zealand, a step that would emphasize the common interest of this country and those British territories in maintenance of the status quo in the entire Pacific area.

Secretary of the Navy Knox declared the suggestion was "a good idea," but that no decision had been reached to make such a cruise.

France Withholds Planes

Daniel C. Roper Seriously Ill Here Of Pneumonia

A victim of pneumonia, Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce and United States Minister to Canada, was seriously ill last night at his home, 3001 Woodland drive northwest.

His physician, Dr. Walter A. Bloedorn, said the 73-year-old former Cabinet member was taken with a chill last Thursday and his condition had been serious since then.

Roper was Secretary of Commerce from 1933 to 1938, following which he served a brief period as Minister to Canada. Recently he has maintained law offices here.

Cincinnati, Oct. 2.—In hushed chagrin, 31,793 Cincinnati fans saw scoreboard attendants post a ghastly "3" for the Detroit Tigers in the second inning, and for the rest of this afternoon that figure hung crepe-like over Crosley Field and the Reds' hopes of winning the opening game of the World Series.

By a score of 7 to 2, the game ultimately passed into the keeping of the American League entry—a triumph for Buck Newsom in his first World Series start—but it was won actually by the Tigers' clouting in that one, explosive second inning.

Big Paul Derringer who, with Bucky Walters, was to be one of the twin pitching aces of the Reds in this World Series, was lashed by the power of the Tigers and driven from the box in the five-run uprising of the Detroit club.

Thus the Tigers bounded into near-prohibitive favoritism to win the World Series, with betting odds against the Reds now lengthened to 3 to 1. Tomorrow, in the second game, the Tigers will toss Schoolboy Rowe at the Reds who will counter

Civil Service Bill Conferees Reach Accord

Mead Amendment Taken From Measure; Senate May Act Today

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The Ramspeck civil service bill moved a long step forward to passage yesterday as Senate and House conferees reached agreement on all disputed points.

Ready for final Senate action, possibly today, the measure would permit the President to bring some 125,000 Federal employes under the merit system if they pass noncompetitive examinations. The only Government posts specifically exempted would be those filled by Presidential appointment and Senate confirmation, assistant district attorneys and all positions in the WPA and TVA.

The conferees yesterday decided to knock out of the bill the Mead amendment giving 8,150 temporary employes of the Census Bureau classified status. This proposal, offered by Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, was the most intensely discussed of all amendments in the bill; but it was eliminated by a close vote after House conferees had warned that the measure might fail to pass if it contained the census provision.

Senate approval of the conference report was presaged by the fact that all five Senate conferees—Republicans and Democrats alike—signed it. But a hot fight was indicated in the House, as both Re-

Willkie Urges Aid to Britain Even if It Means 'Sacrifices'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, Oct. 2.—Wendell Willkie tonight made national defense the first plank in his foreign affairs platform and detailed "what I would do" to overcome what he charged were planless New Deal defense moves.

He declared he would aid "the heroic British people . . . even if it meant the sacrifice of some speed in building up our own airfleet," a declaration expected to be seized upon by those now advocating delivery to Britain of some of this country's bombers and fighter planes, either in use or on order.

He said the Roosevelt Administration "played politics with preparedness," caused the United States to lose influence in foreign relations, and failed to arm strongly when forewarned of war.

It was the Republican nominee's severest indictment of the President's third-term bid.

Foreign Policy Speech

Nationally broadcast from the Cleveland Public Auditorium as the foreign policy speech of his campaign, it followed the most enthusiastic welcome of this Western trip.

A throng estimated at 200,000 massed around the Cleveland Terminal held up the Willkie parade, until the largest police escort in the city's history untangled it.

The Cleveland Municipal Auditorium, scene of the 1936 Republican convention, was packed to its 20,000 capacity for the speech. The crowd waved tiny American flags as it cheered Willkie on to his attack. A band playing "Hail to the Chief" greeted him.

Departed From Text

A surprise on the program was Republican National Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., who later was to board the Willkie train. Martin denounced the third term bid and predicted Willkie will win, with a Republican House to back him.

The nominee made several interpolations in his prepared address. Each drew a good hand. He charged a policy of "Talking loudly and carrying a swagger stick" had been substituted for Teddy Roosevelt's

Rep. Hook Denies Stealing Affection Of WPA Aide's Wife

Representative Frank E. Hook (Democrat), of Michigan, yesterday denied all the charges made by Earl D. Griffin, Work Projects Administration employe, who sued him for $50,000 for alienation of affections.

Representative Hook's denial was filed in the District Court by Attorney Francis J. Kelly.

Griffin's suit was entered August 30 by Attorneys Richard D. Merrick and Dorsey K. Offutt. He declares that the Congressman stole the affections of Mrs. Helen M. Griffin by paying her attentions since January 1, 1936, with the result that she left her husband December 5, 1938, taking with her their son, then 14.

All in the Game

Sen. Thomas, Cincinnati Team Both Lose; Fabrics Bill Passes

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, yesterday competed with the World Series for the attention of his colleagues and came out second best.

The silver-haired Oklahoman, beginning a five-hour denunciation of the "truth in fabrics" bill, requiring that all woolen articles bear labels disclosing the exact fiber content, acknowledged that his speech "probably won't be as interesting as the ball game."

Senators bound for their radios were told by Thomas that they could combine business and pleasure by remaining in the chamber, since he would announce results of the Detroit-Cincinnati game from time to time during his address.

Page boys brought Thomas bulletins on the game at regular intervals during his speech, but fewer than a dozen men remained on the floor to hear the Senator's performance as a sports announcer.

Between flashes from the World Series, Thomas attacked the wool label bill as "anti-cotton legislation" and a step toward regimentation of the milling industry. He said the bill would increase wool prices and raise the cost of Army uniforms. Its labeling standards are "complicated and illogical," he asserted.

After the ball game and the Thomas speech the Senate passed the bill by a vote of 31 to 18. The measure now goes to the White House.

Night Raiders Of R. A. F. Take Off in Near-Gale To Blast Nazis

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Oct. 3.—Night raiders of the Royal Air Force crossed the English Channel in the teeth of a near-gale during the night to stab again at Germany's war storehouses.

Observers along the Dover coast said the British bombers passed up their usual nightly foray on Nazi "invasion ports" on the continental coast and headed inland.

The R. A. F. reported yesterday vast new attacks within Germany that spread from the Rhineland's refineries to the power plants of Berlin.

With the echo of their salvos, the British government, through Hugh Dalton, the minister of economic warfare, declared the Nazis "are back where they started" on oil, having "practically exhausted all they have looted from the countries which they overran."

Now, he said, Germany must provide oil for the occupied nations of Europe from her own synthetic plants—"after the R. A. F. has baptized them"—or milk the diminishing supplies of Russia and Rumania anew.

However, Dalton admitted, the Axis powers are "not so short of oil as I would like."

Berlin Driven to Shelters

Air raid sirens aroused Berliners early today and kept them in shelters for one hour and 12 minutes.

A plane flew twice over the northwest section of the city and drew fire of light and heavy antiaircraft guns.

Principal activity centered in the industrial section on the northwest outskirts, where artillery fired for several minutes at a time.

Authorities said the British raiders dropped no bombs.

Perhaps the greatest of Tuesday night's raids by the R. A. F., beginning with the early darkness and continuing past midnight, was aimed at the refineries of Cologne, on the Rhine.

The air ministry said "explosions and fires" marked the attacks, and added:

"Many vivid bursts were seen."

Britain Abandons Plans for Sending Children Overseas

London, Oct. 2 (AP).—The government announced tonight abandonment "until further notice" of the plan to send British children overseas to escape falling bombs.

"The recent loss of a number of children who were traveling in the (steamship) City of Benares has illustrated the dangers to which passenger vessels are exposed, even when in convoy, under weather conditions now prevailing in the Atlantic," an official government statement said.

The City of Benares, Canada-bound, was sunk about 600 miles west of Ireland the night of September 17 with a loss of 77 children.

Nazis Using Pursuit-Ships As Bombers

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 2.—The German command, disclosing that fighter planes are taking over many of the jobs normally assigned to bomber craft, sent heavy squadrons across the Channel today in continuous assaults on Britain.

Early in the day informed sources had said that full advantage would be taken of the generally favorable weather conditions—including cloud formations—and this forecast was fulfilled.

DNB, the official German news agency, reported tonight that London was under almost ceaseless bombardment, and that targets along the Thames River, in eastern and southeastern areas and across the country to the Irish Sea were attacked heavily.

Oil tanks were fired at Weymouth, DNB said, airports were bombed; harbor facilities at Swansea and New Quay were raided and warehouses burned.

It was a resumption of the far-ranging raids of last night in which, an official communique several times emphasized, some of the most effective hits were scored "with the heaviest caliber bombs" by fighting plane units.

It was the first statement that fighters were being widely used to drop bombs and the reason for the

Nazi Fliers Spar With British, Turn and Flee

Few Bombs Dropped, Though 1,000 Planes Visit Island in Day

London (Thursday), Oct. 2.—Nearly 1,000 German planes dodging through billowing banks of white clouds in formations of between 50 and 200 staged an almost continuous aerial demonstration in the vicinity of London yesterday.

In an obvious attempt to wear down the British fighter defense, they came over, wave after wave and hour after hour, simply to see how long the British could take it. They did not fight, they just sparred. They did not attack the capital's air bases or docks or communication as they had done until Tuesday. They just came over and kept coming over, and when Spitfires and Hurricanes kept going up to meet them in nearly every case, they sheered off and went home without a battle.

Official figures on planes shot down show clearly how the Germans have changed tactics. Though more than 900 planes came over altogether, only ten were shot down. One British plane was lost and according to the air ministry absolutely no damage was done to military objectives.

As usual, the planes came back again at night, but here, again, the attack was not nearly so severe as in the past. Bombs were dropped in the metropolitan area and a number of houses were destroyed

Labor's Bevin May Move Up

Chamberlain Reported Ready To Quit in Cabinet Shuffle

London, Oct. 2.—Old and ailing former Prime Minister Chamberlain, the man who made the ill-fated Munich agreement of September, 1938, will resign shortly as lord president of the council in what may become a sweeping readjustment of the Churchill cabinet, political circles reported tonight.

Lord Halifax, holdover foreign secretary of the Chamberlain government, also may go, London circles said, with Anthony Eden mentioned as his successor.

The same reports said Labor Minister Ernest Bevin probably would become a member of the war cabinet. Bevin is one of the nation's leading Laborites.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill is expected to announce the cabinet changes soon.

The reshuffle may also involve Lord Beaverbrook, Alfred Duff-Cooper, Herbert Morrison and Arthur Greenwood, all members of the present cabinet, who may simply swap jobs, the reports said.

Chamberlain, who stepped down as prime minister last spring, after the failure of the campaign in Norway, has been recovering from a recent operation.

Lord Halifax, tall, gaunt foreign secretary, succeeded to that position when Eden split with Chamberlain over the prewar appeasement policy. Eden now is secretary of state for war.

The Scene Shifts

Special Cable to The Post

London, Oct. 2.—British sources tonight pictured Adolf Hitler as sidetracking his plan to invade Britain this year.

These sources indicated that Africa would become the main arena of war between Britain and the Axis alliance and that this would be accompanied by general spread of the conflict to southeastern Europe.

Signs pointing to this were:

1. GERMANY REPORTEDLY ALREADY has taken over from Italy direction of the struggle which Italy has been waging in north Africa, with capture of the Suez Canal as the chief objective.

2. WORD FROM BERLIN THAT as the Nazi bombers are increasingly handicapped by storm clouds enshrouding England this winter, the "most important" Axis military activity undoubtedly will shift to attacks on Egypt, the Suez Canal and other British outposts.

3. FOR MORE THAN TWO weeks the Italians have failed to attempt further gains in the Egyptian sector after advancing to Sidi Barrani, 75 miles inside Egypt from Libya.

4. THE DIPLOMATIC CORRESPONDENT of the British news agency, Reuters, said Japanese newsmen in Berlin had been told officially that the Reich no longer feels it essential to hasten the decisive blow against the Island Kingdom. The reason reportedly given for this was that the new German-Italo-Japanese military alliance make the Reich so strong that an immediate knockout of Britain is not now considered imperative.

5. LOCAL AUTONOMY RIGHTS for German and Italian residents of French-mandated Syria were reported to have been demanded tonight by a German-Italian mission dispatched to that key eastern state.

6. BRITISH CIRCLES IN BUDAPEST said the Churchill government may find it necessary "almost any day" to remove all nationals from the Balkan states because the chance of war speading to that area has become extremely serious.

British circles pointed out that with Egypt as the great winter battleground the likely first objectives of a joint German-Italian push would be the British bases at Marsa Matruh and Alexandria.

It was admitted that there was no specific information regarding arrival of German soldiers or war materials in Africa, other than previously admitted Nazi reports of units which have been sent to the Italian front to gain experience or give technical assistance.

Regarding the failure of the Fascists to consolidate gains in that sector, it was known that the Italian troops have been constantly subjected to heavy attacks by British air and naval forces.

Intensive raids have been made in the past 48 hours on Italian bases on the Mediterranean coast of North Africa where Marshal Rodolfo Graziani has been attempting to build up and protect his supply lines.

Italian troops are concentrating on the Sudan frontier, especially in the Kassala area, it was added, but there has been no movement into Sudanese territory except by small patrols.

On the Kenya front the Italians have confined their activity to patrols, it was said.

Nazis Reported Moving

The Italians also seem to be active near Fort Giaghbub, 150 miles south of Sollum. Here a road—a rarity in the desert—leads 60 miles into Egypt to the oasis of Siwa from which the Italians could strike out against either the important rail center of Marsa Matruh or the British naval establishment at Alexandria.

The well-nigh total absence of Hitler's dive bombers from raids on Britain lent the color of probability to reports that these strafers had been shifted south—to Africa.

Of keen significance also were stories that foot and motorized soldiers of Germany's war-seasoned army have been moving through Italy to the African theater of combat to reinforce Marshal Graziani's desert divisions.

Advices to Budapest indicated the Axis insistence on autonomy rights in Syria was added to demands previously made, calling for Italo-German air and naval bases in Syria and Italian guardianship over French warplanes stationed there.

Axis Using Minority Claims

Following a technique already familiar by its application to Czecho-Slovakia and other smaller European lands, the Nazi-Fascist mission was understood to have insisted on the "right of free political organization" in behalf of Germans and Italians in Syria.

Thus, the Axis apparently was employing its minorities in Syria as a lever with which to pry loose the opposition of Syrian French authorities to the Italo-German military demands.

German and Italian bases in Syria would obviously create a menace to Britain's Mosul oil, which is piped to the Mediterranean via Haifa, Palestine.

Accordingly, Balkan circles took special note of the report that Britain is planning to evacuate all her subjects now living in Balkan countries, bringing them across southwestern Asia through Turkey, Iraq or India. Budapest heard a report that British legations in the Balkan capitals are advising all Britons to make ready for departure.

Britain is not the only nation harboring expectations of new trouble in the Balkans.

The Rumanian government of Premier Gen. Antonescu is understood to be contemplating a shift of its capital from Bucharest to another town in the mountains and farther inland—a location easier to defend.

At Sofia the Bulgarian government of Premier Bogdan Filoff is reported preparing to resign next week and Peter Draganoff, Bulgarian minister to Germany, is mentioned as the new premier.

Despite the Axis plan to shift the center of military operations to the Mediterranean area, observers here believed vast German concentrations of men and materials will be maintained in the Channel ports along the coast of France and the Low Countries throughout the winter.

Would Tie Up Ships

The threat of invasion, it was thought, would keep Britain's North Sea fleet—including some of the world's most powerful battleships—from turning south to fight Germany's Italian allies in the Mediterranean.

U.S.-Canada Board To Speed Defense Of West Coast

Boston, Oct. 2 (AP).—A Canadian-American joint defense board reported such progress today that "the defense of New England has been removed many hundred miles to the east."

At the same time, the spokesman, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, chairman of the American division, referred to the recently announced Japanese alliance with the Axis powers by saying:

"By reason of what happened in Europe a few days ago, we must expedite plans for West Coast defense."

Col. O. M. Biggar, head of the Canadian division, said Canada already had concerned itself with West Coast defenses.

The board met at the Boston Navy Yard today, preparatory to a voyage to the Canadian maritime provinces. Mayor LaGuardia said many of its proposals already have been accepted and some "actually have been consummated."

action immediately. Both measures have passed the House.

The committee eliminated $80,000,000 with which to start construction of 4,000 new airports, members explaining that plans for the ports are as yet somewhat vague.

French Ambassador Gaston Henry Haye said at New York that this Government has asked France to return 0 American-made planes sold to France but marooned at the island of Martinique since the French military collapse. The Ambassador said terms of the armistice with Germany prevented compliance.

Secretary Knox revealed that Admiral James C. Richardson, commander of the fleet, is coming to Washington for talk "on the general situation in the Pacific."

The Navy announced its air strength in these figures: useful planes on hand, 1,812, with 446 others classed as obsolete or experimental; total planes on order, 3,001, including combatant, training and utility machines.

Using the present Atlantic Squadron as a nucleus, the patrol force will include new fighting craft already off the ways or under construction, which originally were to have been sent West to the Fleet, recently recommissioned vessels, and ships purchased for converted for naval use.

"Having all the vessels in the Atlantic under one commander," the Navy announcement said, "will result in increased efficiency in the operations and training of the vessels."

Already available for the force are the battleships New York, Texas and Arkansas and the partially demilitarized Wyoming, the aircraft carriers Wasp and Ranger, a number of cruisers and probably twoscore destroyers. Ships now in the neutrality patrol far off the coast, it was understood, also will be in the patrol force.

Knox, at his press conference denied the United States is negotiating for use of the British naval base at Singapore, but said the fleet needs more Pacific bases.

He said that American and British army and navy officials, to speed up production, will confer this week at the Consolidated Aircraft Co., San Diego, Calif., on standardizing of construction of planes ordered by both nations.

Reporters were told, also, that the Navy has no plans to reinforce the Asiatic fleet, the Yangtze patrol or units at the Philippines, and that no thought has been given to withdrawing the force of about 1,000 Marines on duty in Shanghai.

The Navy announced that approximately 2,900 officers and men of the First Marine Brigade would leave Norfolk October 12, for a winter's service and training at the Guantanamo, Cuba, base.

The force will travel on the transports McCawley and Barnett, with Brig. Gen. H. M. Smith in command.

The Army temporarily promoted approximately 3,600 lieutenants to fill vacancies caused by recent mass promotions of higher ranking officers.

More than 2,100 first lieutenants were moved up to captains. The remainder were second lieutenants promoted to first lieutenants.

Appropriation bills given committee approval included one for $1,482,693,336 to feed, clothe, pay, equip and train a fighting force of 1,024,441 conscripts and National Guardsmen.

The second was a $199,418,728 civil functions bill, containing funds to train 700,000 civilian defense workers.

The French Ambassador told a New York interviewer that France would like to sell back to this country the planes now blockaded at Martinique by the British, and get back the $7,000,000 to $9,000,000 paid for them. He said, however, that such an act, violating the armistice terms, might work adversely for Great Britain by resulting in the Germans taking over several hundred French planes now in unoccupied France.

Nazi Air Attack On Britain Fades

in the suburbs and in scattered districts all over the country, but seen from any point of view this is definitely no blitzkrieg.

[Several "Molotoff breadbasket" incendiary bombs burst over a famous boys' school in southeastern England, the Associated Press reported. A fire was started but there were no casualties. The name of the school was not disclosed, but it was pointed out that two of the most famous boys' schools in southeastern England are Eton and Harrow. Eton is in the vicinity of Windsor Castle, one of the royal homes.]

Meanwhile, heavy German guns shelled the Dover coast heavily from across the Channel.

As a result of the daylight nuisance raids, the London sirens are getting to be something of a joke. Between 9 a. m. and twilight today they sounded 14 times—7 warnings and 7 "all clears." Three weeks ago people took cover when these sirens sounded, some industries stopped and business was interrupted. Today even the most timid of dlady had trouble remembering whether the raid was on or off.

Bomber Pays for Visit

Though the Germans came over in formation at a great height they returned singly or in pairs and a few of them attacked southeast towns on the way. One big bomber came right down to the housetops in one town and machine-gunned the streets.

A few minutes later a raider went over a neighboring suburb and dropped a stick of bombs, destroying several buildings and an adjoining maternity hospital. But as the pilot started out to sea a British fighter shot him down in open country.

Another straggler came down over a neighboring southeast town and dropped ten bombs. These wiped out four unoccupied houses and killed a man, woman and child who were caught in the street.

As usual, last night the raiders showered incendiary bombs as soon as they came over. Here and there a fire started but as is usually the case with these incendiaries, they are quickly extinguished.

Later the raiders started to drop high-explosive bombs. One bomb hit an apartment house, which was immediately evacuated. Another damaged a school and in the same area a church dating from Saxon times received a direct hit.

One thing that has surprised the air authorities here is the failure of the Germans to introduce new planes during the blitzkrieg. It has been known for some time that the Nazis were producing a new type but so far they have not appeared and there is definite evidence to support the British contention that recently German technicians have been forced to improvise in order to try to make their standard types more effective.

Italian Press Offers Russia Olive Branch

Nations Have Always Been Great Friends, Editor Gayda Says

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Oct. 2.—An editorial of extraordinary friendliness toward Russia, comparing some aspects of communism to similar characteristics of fascism, by Virginio Gayda, appears in today's Giornale d'Italia.

This is a far cry from the embittered rivalry of the Spanish war period and the gibes of last winter during the Finnish campaign. In a minor way it is evidence of an Italian approach reminiscent of the startling policy switch made by Germany in August, 1939.

Signor Gayda, an authoritative Fascist spokesman, takes for his theme two editorials in the Russian newspapers Ilzvestia and Pravda accepting the tripartite pact between Germany, Italy and Japan, and reaffirming Russian neutrality. These, he says, "blow up the maneuvers of the British" in saying the treaty is aimed against Russia and the United States. "In the United States," Signor Gayda continues, "notwithstanding the agitation of the usual plutocratic extremists, more responsible currents have remained tranquil and cautious."

Were Always Friends

Regarding Russia, he gives first an historical summary to show that Italy was always friendly to Russia. On February 7, 1924, Italy recognized the U. S. S. R. and was the first great European power to do so. On September 2, 1933, a pact of friendship, nonaggression and neutrality was signed. By this treaty both parties agreed "not to enter any understanding of a political or economic order or any combination directed against one or the other party." Despite the Spanish war, which intervened in 1936-1939, Signor Gayda says this text has always remained valid.

"Italian policy during the Fascist era has never shown any wavering and even less any hostility toward Soviet Russia. It has been inspired by calm, Mussolinian realism. It has resumed political and economic relations, overcoming political ideologies which primarily concerned the internal regimes.

"Italy, which is always attentive to the phenomena of humanity and nations, has been following with great interest for a long time the internal evolutions of Russian concepts and her political system. We do not mean to say there are many points of identity or of confusion between the two regimes. Certainly in their practical creations one can trace affinities of inspiration and application.

New Policies Praised

"It has already been pointed out that there is a new demographic and family policy in Russia with a system of laws not dissimilar to that created by the Fascist regime. No less notable are the directions taken by economic and social policies, which tend toward forms of autarchic organizations and authoritarian principles in the management of businesses."

These remarks by Signor Gayda certainly represent the most striking expression of affinities between communism and fascism yet made in Italy. Italians in any event are convinced it is too late for Russia to make any drastic move and, whatever the reasons, may be willing to work with the Axis.

U. S. Called "Ignorant"

Rome, Oct. 2 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's newspaper criticized the people of the United States today as "the most ignorant of the white race" and hinted strongly that Germany and Italy are counting on Spain to offset American and British influence in Latin America.

Just how Spain would play her part and the precise role she would have in the new Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis remained unanswered, however, as Spanish Minister of Government Ramon Serrano Suner wound up a series of Rome-Berlin conferences.

Commentator Mario Appelius, writing in Il Duce's Il Popolo Di Roma, bitterly attacked the United States, England and France as great enemies of Spain and its historic mission.

"The people of the world have two wishes," he said. "First, to free themselves from English domination, and, second, to free themselves from the plutocratic tyranny represented by the United States. . . .

"North American people are the most ignorant of the white race. The present tragic isolation of the English-speaking people comes precisely from their ignorance of the history of civilization."

British Learn Nearly All Nazi Plane Secrets

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 2.—British air experts reported today they have examined so many German planes shot down over England that they know virtually all German aircraft secrets—even those of the latest planes.

Many of the planes, these experts said, have been in such good condition even after they crashed that they had no trouble seeing every part.

They generally concluded that while the performance of German planes has not been as good as the British planes, materials used in construction of the German aircraft were good, the workmanship sound and the finishing excellently done.

The British experts said they found the fuel was up to standard although some of the planes had devices which made possible the use of ersatz (substitute) fuels.

In some planes, for example, there was a special tank for high test fuel used in starting after which the pilot switched over to a lower grade gasoline.

The German craft carried some instruments which are not in use on British planes, but these were not described by the experts.

Examination of the planes, the experts also declared, revealed that the night bombing of London has been carried out mainly with Heinkels with a small number of Junkers 88s. The latter are used for daylight attacks.

The reasons were believed to be that the Heinkel night bomber has less defensive equipment than the Junkers 88. Consequently the Junkers are reserved for daylight, as they are able to put up a better fight against the British defenders.

The experts said that exhaustive tests had convinced them the German Messerschmitts are not so maneuverable nor as fast as British Spitfires and Hurricanes.

British pilots, however, acknowledged they had a healthy respect for the Messerschmitt 110 twin-engine fighter bomber, which is regarded as an excellent plane and the best in German production.

Another development discovered was that the Junkers 88 dive bomber has had its number of free machineguns doubled from three to six. This particular plane, dated August 7, was regarded as one of the newest German designs.

German designers appeared to be piling on armor and armament in an effort to cut down losses they are suffering in the battle for Britain.

Quartermaster's Office to Begin Moving Today

Government movers this morning will begin shifting the equipment of 800 employes of the Army Quartermaster General's office from the Munitions and Potomac Park buildings into the new Railroad Retirement Building at Third and D streets southwest.

The Army is taking over the new building for the duration of the defense emergency. The board for which the structure was intended will remain in its present rented quarters.

Moving operations, directed by Clay J. Guthridge, head of the section of planning and space control of Public Buildings Administration, are on a 24-hour basis. The job is expected to be finished Sunday.

France to the Netherlands; again, the raiders were over Berlin.

"Four terrific explosions" burst amid a big Berlin electric equipment factory, one pilot said.

Other fires and explosions were described at a Berlin munitions factory and elsewhere in the industrial northwest of the German capital.

Oil refineries at Sterkrade, north of Dusseldorf and at Glesenkirchen were raided; "at Sterkrade a large fuel plant was hit and great fires broke out," said the air ministry.

"One of our aircraft, having dropped a stick of high explosives on Sterkrade, went to the Fokker airplane works at Amsterdam and emptied his load there.

"At Gelsenkirchen, fires were started that were still visible when our aircraft were 60 miles on their homeward journey, and later aircraft on the scene intensified the fires with incendiaries."

The power station at Duisburg exploded with a "vivid, green" blast, it was related. Another power station was bombed at Cologne and railway yards were blasted there and at Hamm, Soest, Duisburg, Coblenz and Gremberg.

From above the invasion ports, the pilots reported that bombs straddled the main basin and started fires in the dock area at Dunkerque; that direct hits were scored on two basins at Boulogne despite heavy fighter resistance; that high explosive and incendiary bombs were rained on the piers at Flushing and that bombs were seen to burst close to the "Big Bertha" emplacements at Cap Gris Nez.

The attacks here were carried out under intense fire from coastal batteries.

At Le Havre, the pilots said, two raids within an hour by separate forces of bombers left damage from high explosive bombs in the Carnot Basin, on the quays of the tidal harbor . . . "and one big explosion broke out in several parts of the harbor."

A plane factory at Rotterdam, an airdome at Hammstede, the Netherlands, and the Veere, Netherland seaplane base, also were raided.

German Fighters Used as Bombers

adoption of this tactic was not discussed.

(The British of late have been claiming a high percentage of destruction among German bombers, craft much costlier than fighter planes and more difficult to replace.)

Bombed last night and early today, the high command said, were many "war essential targets" in London and in southern and central England.

These were among specific results claimed:

Hangars and planes damaged at the Pembroke-Carew Airport; "Great fires, explosions and damages" left in the Liverpool port area and in industrial Manchester; big bombs loosed upon an armament plant north of London and on a nearby airport in a surprise attack by single fighting planes.

Great fire damage wrought by British attacks in western German cities was acknowledged, but it was said to have been confined to "numerous apartment houses."

Antiaircraft fire was declared to have forced abandonment of the British night assault on Berlin, although it was added that incendiary and explosive bombs fell on a brick works west of the city.

British attacks were hindered, the high command said, "by specially developed tactics of night chasers and antiaircraft artillery."

Willkie Text Asking Strong Defenses

In Foreign Policy Speech at Cleveland, Republican Candidate Charges New Deal 'Played Politics With Our Safety'

Cleveland, Oct. 2.—Following is the text of a speech prepared for delivery here tonight by Wendell L. Willkie:

A few days ago there was announced in Berlin a pact between three nations—the three most aggressive nations on earth—Germany, Italy and Japan.

It is a commonly accepted fact that this alliance is aimed at the United States. It says in effect that if we become involved in a war with Japan, then Germany and Italy will join that war against us.

And, if, on the other hand, we become involved in a war with Germany, then Japan and Italy will join against us.

We don't know what motives those nations have in signing such a pact. But for the present we don't have to know, because one thing is clear enough.

It is clear enough, I believe, that Germany, Italy, and Japan are thinking of the United States in terms of war, in terms of our participation in some bloody conflict of the future. Either they have aggressive designs against us, or else they suspect us of having aggressive designs against them.

Peace For America

I am shocked by this fact, and I know that you people are. The American people do not want war. They have no idea whatever of joining any conflict, whether on the Atlantic or the Pacific. They are determined to keep America at peace.

In this determination I stand with them. I am for keeping out of war. I am for peace for America.

And I want to ask this question: Where are we? How did we get into this position? What have we done, overtly or secretly, to cause the most ruthless states in the world to make this aggressive declaration?

I say we must stop right where we are. We must stop and look about us and take stock of our affairs. Let us stop and think. Let us talk among ourselves. Let us reason. Let us find out what our foreign policy really is. Let us determine what it really ought to be.

For my part I have little confidence that the policy of the last seven and a half years has been the policy best calculated to promote peace.

I have still less confidence that the policy at the present time is calculated to preserve peace. And I have no confidence at all in the ability of the present Administration to protect our peace with an adequate defense system.

In the present situation my confidence is in the American people. I have confidence in what they want. And I have confidence in their ability to get it.

First Foreign Policy

What the American people want above everything else is a defense system so strong that none of these nations will dare to strike at us, from whatever motives. And until the people have that defense system, they don't want any more international incidents. They don't want any more dramatic gestures. They don't want any more swashbuckling words. Before talking any more they want to get down to business. They want to build themselves an Army, a Navy and above all an Air Force. They want to make themselves strong.

That is what I stand for. I say that the first plank of our foreign policy is a defense system. I'll even go further than that. Until we get a defense system we cannot have a foreign policy that means anything at all.

For many years the American people have been told that theirs is the greatest and most powerful country on earth. We did everything in a big way. We produced the most steel. We consumed the most rubber. We had the most gold. We had the tallest buildings and the longest concrete roads—more sedans and more radios than any other country. We were so great in these ways—so it was said—that one word from the United States to a foreign ruler would make him tremble in his boots. All that we had to do to maintain peace and protect our interest was to throw the "weight of our influence in this direction or that." Since that time we have told various countries not to do certain things of which we disapproved. We told Italy not to go into Ethiopia. Now Italy hasn't as many skyscrapers and radios and hard-surfaced road as we have, but she disregarded our pleas.

Neither Strong Nor Great

We talked the nations into holding a conference at Munich in 1938—as the American White Paper says, "Mussolini's anguished pressure, seconded by the President's appeal, had been effective." The Administration was very proud of the results of that conference. The then Secretary of War made a speech in which he declared that "the cool mind, the skilled fingers of one man"—meaning Mr. Roosevelt—had resolved the war crisis.

Yet everyone knows how that crisis was really resolved. Not only was Czecho-Slovakia sacrificed to Hitler, but Europe was at war within a year.

The fact is that in the eyes of ruthless foreign states we are neither a strong nation nor a great nation. Nothing we have to say is of any consequence to them. Because they see how ineffective we have become. Our vast strength has not been brought forth. It is still "on order."

I propose, therefore, that we stop talk. I propose that we get to work. I propose to set about making this Nation in fact the greatest Nation in the world. That is the objective that I lay before you. To reach that objective our industries and our man power must be made effective. They must be made effective for domestic prosperity, and they must be made effective for defense.

In recent weeks I have explained some of my ideas about domestic prosperity. Tonight I want to examine the problem of defense.

The defense job that lies ahead of us is appalling in magnitude. We need an adequate army. Whatever the size of this force should be, the fact is that the largest force we could put into the field today, completely equipped, is 75,000.

Unpleasant Facts

The Navy that we have is a one-ocean navy which can only protect both oceans if the Panama Canal is kept open. Yet the Panama Canal is impossible to protect against the explosion of a ship inside one of the locks.

In the light of European battle experience, all but a few hundred of our airplanes are obsolete.

These are unpleasant facts. But if ever there was a time to face facts, now is the time. What must we do to change these facts. Let me give you just a few examples. Official testimony given to Congress this spring shows that for an army of 750,000 men we require the following:

We need 3,750 mortars—these are guns that can be quickly used to throw fire over a high place. It will take at least 13 months to get them, if we get going now.

We need 120 one-o-five millimeter guns. To get them will take 13 months, if we get going now.

We need about 2,400 tanks. To get them will take 13 months, if we get going now.

We need 1,400 antitank guns. To get them will take 21 months, if we get going now.

We need 240,000 semiautomatic rifles. They are the rifles that can shoot faster and more accurately than the rifles of old war days. To get them will take 21 months, if we get going now.

We need 300 90-millemeter antiaircraft guns. These are the guns which shoot several miles up into the air, and they are vital to the defense of our cities. We haven't got a single one of those guns. To get them, and the direction finders and height finders that go with them, will take 27 months, if we get going now.

Terrible Plight

Having only a one-ocean navy we need to make the Panama Canal safe by building two sets of locks, so that if one is destroyed we may use the other. To get those locks will take six years.

And, of course, eventually we need a two-ocean navy. But that objective will take seven years. And besides that, there are not even any paper plans available to local officials instructing them now to protect the public from air raid damage to water works, gas mains, or sewage. In those matters so vital to health and life we are as unprepared as if Adolf Hitler had never existed.

That we should be exposed to air attacks may sound improbable, but my authority is the third term candidate, who described the danger vividly some months ago in a radio talk.

The plain fact is that we are late. We are terribly late. And when I consider how terribly late we are, how confused, how devoid of plan or accomplishment, I cannot believe that the American people will dare to intrust their welfare for another four years to the present Administration. It is claimed on behalf of this Administration that it saw more clearly than anyone else what the course of events was to be. But if it saw it all so clearly, why are we in this terrible plight?

In 1933 Adolf Hitler rose to power. That was also the year that the New Deal took office. But 1933 was the year when the New Deal crushed the London economic conference, thereby, destroying the last hope of financial stability for the democratic world. And in 1937, when the democracies had succeeded in recovering somewhat from world-wide depression and instability, the New Deal launched an attack against commodity prices, against American business and against the Supreme Court. The result was a violent depression in this country at the exact time when our prosperity might have strengthened the other democracies and enabled them to resist the advance of Hitler.

Nothing Done

The New Dealers could see Hitler advancing. What steps did they take to protect us?

In 1929, when there was no Adolf Hitler and Europe was at peace, 21 per cent of total Government expenses were for defense. But in 1936, when Hitler was rising to power, we spent only 9 per cent of our money on defense—the lowest percentage in modern history. In 1938, the year of Munich, we spent only 14 per cent on defense. In 1939, the year of the outbreak of war, we spent only minus 13 per cent.

On the basis of the information that he gets from the State Department and the Army and Navy, the present third-term candidate was able to predict the war a year ago last June, four months before it started. But three months later, in August, he had done nothing about it.

At that time, the Acting Secretaries of War and Navy urged him to put into immediate operation detailed plans for the procurement of military supplies, especially powder, guns and airplanes. They pointed out that some items took as long as one, two, or even three years to obtain, and that in many cases the capacity to produce them did not even exist.

The result of this pressure was the war resources board, with Edward Stettinius as chairman. Now this board corresponded closely with the type of board that the War Department had planned for just such an emergency. That plan is not secret. It is called the Industrial Mobilization Plan of 1939.

Outgrowth of Plan

That plan was the result of more than 15 years of study as required by the National Defense Act of 1920. It has been developed out of Congressional hearings and with the advice of the most competent and experienced men in the country, including men now dead who had learned to solve the problems of industrial mobilization in the last World War.

It is safe to say that no Democratic country in the world had made so much progress toward planning how to meet an emergency, as had the United States. The Stettinius Board, which included some of the ablest men in the country, was itself an outgrowth of that plan. And the report that it submitted to the President very properly adhered closely to the plan.

But what happened?

The inner circle of New Dealers became alarmed lest, in our efforts to defend America, some of their arbitrary powers might be taken away from them. They set to work to sabotage the Stettinius board. And in September, 1939, Americans were mystified to hear that the work of the board would be terminated. The mystification of the average citizen arose from the fact that the board was dismissed just after war had broken out in Europe. And to this day its report has never been made public. It has not even been made available to Congress.

The dismissal of the Stettinius board cost us a delay of nine months—nine long months while the other democracies were collapsing in Europe.

Precious Time Lost

My fellow Americans, before you dismiss that delay as inconsequential, think what nine months—nine extra months in which to prepare—would mean to Great Britain right now. Yet the New Deal has lost even more of our precious time. Instead of following the wise industrial mobilization plan, it has gone back to the days before the World War. It has cast aside the experience of that war and more than 15 years of careful planning.

It has set us an Advisory Defense Board—a board without authority, without even a chairman. For every major decision, the members of this board must consult directly with the President—the third-term candidate—whose desk is already crowded with the affairs of state.

There can be no mystery about this. The reason that we are unprepared is because the present Administration has played politics with preparedness. It has played politics with our safety.

Let me recall to you again that in 1936 the ratio of defense expenditures to total expenditures dropped to its lowest point. Surely that was not from motives of economy. Surely it was not because the New Deal had no information of the danger. No! 1936 was an election year. There were other, more attractive ways to spend the money.

Genius for Production

I say that we are now exposed to the aggressors because of the political theories and the political ambitions of a few men we are not prepared and we are not getting prepared.

I stand before you tonight and I say: We must become prepared. we must begin before anything else happens and before anything else is said. We must begin now. And I know where to begin. We must begin at the source of our former greatness, our former power. We must begin with American industry.

It is industry that once made us the greatest nation in the world, and it is industry that will do that again today. We have a genius for industrial production. In building a defense system we are in effect building a new industry—an armament industry. We must remember that. We cannot make ourselves strong by a patchwork method. We cannot take a little from this industry and a little from that industry; we cannot hope in that way to build anything that will frighten Adolf Hitler. We must unify industry with cooperation of every worker, manager, and owner in the United States.

I can win that cooperation for you. I have confidence in the workers and managers of American industry. And they have confidence in me. If you were to entrust to me the safety of America in this critical time, here is what I would do: I would first make some intelligent use of the experience of the World War and the careful plans of the Army and Navy. To carry out those experienced plans I would appoint the most experienced and the ablest men. Those national defense appointments would be made irrespective of political considerations.

Many of the men I would appoint are already in Washington. But I would enable these men to become effective by giving them full authority—and if they did not get results they would go.

The authority of these men, however, would be temporary authority. There would be no danger of permanently sacrificing any of the people's rightful powers. At the conclusion of the emergency the temporary boards would be liquidated and their powers would automatically return to the people. As President of the United States I would not seek power. I would consider it my duty to protect the people's power, and to return to them any temporary powers that they might grant me for the purpose of defending them. The problem of American defense is a twofold problem. It is a problem of coordination and a problem of capacity.

Coordination will be achieved through the defense agencies in Washington that I have just mentioned. In order to increase capacity I will remove every possible obstacle that stands in the way of new investment. This would not mean the removal of wise regulations for industry, nor of taxes to prevent war profiteering. It would, however, mean a revision of the tax system and the inspiring of confidence in those who are to be called upon to take the risks. Until I had built up the strength of America, I would refrain from inviting aggressive pacts against the American people.

I would continue my efforts to aid the heroic British people—the only people in the world today who are fighting with their lives for liberty. I would aid Britain even if it meant the sacrifice of some speed in building up our own airfleet. I would do so because the longer Britain holds out, the more time we have in which to prepare ourselves. I favor, finally, taking intelligent steps to coordinate our defense program with that of Canada. And I favor economic cooperation with our neighbors in the south—not with New Deal schemes but on the basis of expanding private enterprise. I favor giving those neighbors every incentive to rid themselves of the German fifth column, which is active in many of them.

Battle of America

We must hurry with these things. The time is short and the life we have to defend is exceedingly precious. And until we have them—the things and the policies to fight with—we must pause. We must not rashly move. Any man who involves us in the risk of war, while we are thus unprepared betrays his country.

The task before us is grim and hard. But we can still lead the world out of depression and disaster and despair and war. We can still lead the world toward prosperity and progress and peace and hope.

Oh, believe me, we can. The goals before us are distant. But this is the time, now, before it is finally too late, to stop, to think, to define those goals and to become competent to achieve them.

I have called this the Battle of America. The Battle of America is a battle for liberty. It belongs right here at home. It is a battle to release once more the gigantic productive forces of our people, and to provide for their impregnable defense. It is a battle to create a society strong enough to maintain itself in peace.

In that battle, I promise you victory. I promise you victory because I believe in victory. With all my strength, and all my heart, and all my soul, I believe in victory. And I promise you victory before it is too late.

Lehman Calls Willkie Reply 'Distortion'

Nominee Forced To Compromise Views, N. Y. Governor Says

By the Associated Press

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Democratic Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, answering Wendell L. Willkie's criticism of his assertion that President Roosevelt's defeat would comfort world dictators, said today the real leadership of the Republican Party is "having the effect of causing him to compromise his own best judgment" on foreign policy.

Lehman asserted the Republican Presidential nominee's interpretation of his statement, made in the keynote speech at the Democratic State convention in New York City Monday, was "a complete distortion" and "does not in any way impugn Mr. Willkie's patriotism or his devotion to American democracy."

Appeasers in His Own Party

Willkie termed the original Lehman statement "false, malicious and subversive."

Reiterating that Roosevelt "typifies the kind of liberty that dictators hate," the chief executive of the President's home State added:

"If Mr. Willkie were ever to be elected President, he would have to deal with the same miscellaneous assortment of appeasers and extreme isolationists in his own party that he has had to deal with as a candidate.

"Nobody who has followed the course of Mr. Willkie's campaign from his pre-convention days, when he approved of Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policies in general, until now, when he finds fault with them in detail, can avoid the impression that the real leadership of the Republican Party is having the effect of causing him to compromise his own best judgement."

Lehman declared that Willkie may "in the course of years dominate his party and prevail upon its leaders to get around to his own point of view."

"But in these critical times," he added, "we can ill afford the delay incident to this prolonged educational process."

Pontiac Apologizes for Egg-Throwing

Pontiac, Mich., Oct. 2 (AP).—Formal apologies for the egg-throwing incident that marred the campaign visit of Wendell L. Willkie yesterday followed the Republican Presidential nominee's special train out of the State today.

Five high school students were questioned in connection with the egg-throwing. Bruce Bragan, 17, son of an automobile factory employe, pleaded guilty to a part in the disturbance, although he denied tossing the egg that spattered Mrs. Willkie's dress. Municipal Judge Milton F. Cooney released him to return for sentencing on a disorderly charge October 14.

In Detroit Miss Doris M. LeRoue, 31, typist for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, accused of hurling a wastepaper basket from an eighteenth floor hotel room during the Willkie visit here Monday, was released on $500 personal bond.

Uruguay General Denies Nazi Peril

Party Small, Under Complete Control, Bergalli Declares

By Gen. Marcelino Bergalli

Commanding General of the Army of Uruguay.

Gen. Marcelino Bergalli, commanding general of the Army of Uruguay and member of the 20-man Latin-American military mission now touring this Nation's defenses, writes for International News Service on the extent of Nazi influence in his South American republic. Recent press dispatches from there have declared a powerful and menacing Nazi element exists in Uruguay.)

I can tell all of you in the United States, who I know are deeply concerned, that we in Uruguay are quite confident that the Nazis are never going to give us any serious trouble.

Why do I say this with such positive assurance?

Because we persons of authority in my country know, beyond any doubt, that we exert complete control over the Nazi minority. And—something which is much more important—we know that all of the people of Uruguay are looking, for their future, not eastward to Germany, but earnestly northward to the United States!

I can express this part of it very simply—we are Americans.

Now, just how strong is the Nazi element in Uruguay?

Actually, the Nazis are not at all powerful in our country. They are, in fact, a remarkably weak minority. The Nazis, I may estimate, represent less than 1 per cent of the population of Uruguay.

"Under Our Thumb"

They do not constitute—and they shall not—any menace to our government, our industry, our agriculture or our institutions. What few there are, as you might say up here, are "under our thumb"—and I may be permitted to say that it is a pretty strong thumb.

You may not be conversant with the facts of our military strength. We have 7,000 vigorous, well-equipped regulars, but we can in short order throw 200,000 soldiers into the field, if there be need. We are not worried.

Here is the whole story of the Nazis in Uruguay—in a nutshell—and why we feel quite capable of coping with them:

They are few. They have no resources. They operate independently. They have no apparent support or backing of any considerable or formidable character from the fatherland. So why is it now so strange that, not sympathizing in any sense with their principles, we are able to control them as we do?

I shall concede that it is remotely possible that they have ties with Germany which are not now apparent to us. But if this is so, those ties will be cut asunder the moment they become evident.

Nazi Plot Was Unimportant

You are no doubt aware of the recently reported Nazi plot to overthrow our government. It was fundamentally an unimportant conspiracy. The Chamber of Deputies conducted a full inquiry, and on the eve of my departure for your country on September 24, eight persons had been arrested and are now being dealt with by the attorney general in accordance with the procedure of the national court.

It might be of interest, since you in your country have a draft program taking effect soon, to know that on the occasion of the recent conscription in Uruguay, more than 80,000 male citizens volunteered for military service before the program actually began.

We possess the strength necessary to maintain internal order and that strength, for whatever it is worth—I will now promise you—is available for instant use in fulfillment of those determined intentions for hemispheric defense which are the new, resolute policy of the United States Government.

Latin-American Army Leaders Visit Langley, Go on to Benning

Bombing Demonstration at Virginia Field Canceled Because of Bad Weather; Officers Toast Friendship at Fort Monroe

High ranking military officers of nine Latin American countries, who took off from Bolling Field yesterday morning for a tour of this Nation's military establishments had to do without a bombing demonstration planned at Langley Field, Va., for their first stop.

Weather conditions caused cancellation of the exhibition, but the visitors viewed at length experimental laboratories and air and ground armament.

At nearby Fort Monroe, the Latin Americans and United States Army officers toasted "everlasting friendship" of the Americas and "the desire and hope" for peace. They also saw a gunnery demonstration there and visited the submarine mine depot for a demonstration of mine sowing.

Today they will fly to Fort Benning, Ga., on the second lap of their aerial tour.

The officers represent Bolivia, Colombia, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Honduras, Panama, Peru and Uruguay.

When they took off from Bolling Field at 9:40 a. m., Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. Army chief of staff, members of the Latin American diplomatic corps and various ranking American officers were on hand to wish them luck.

D. C. Stores Asked to Send Draft Aides

U. S. Departments Also Are Canvassed For 7,200 Volunteers

All Federal departments and a score of Washington's largest business houses last night were preparing to throw volunteers from their personnel into the job of registering 98,500 conscription-age Washingtonians October 16.

On the heels of an appeal from Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools and chief draft registration officer, department heads issued orders for the canvassing of employes willing to help take the inventory of the Capital's man power on Registration Day.

Holmes issued the calls to the departments and local firms in an effort to secure the services of several thousand workers still needed to compelte a registration force of 7,200.

Already prepared to assume duties as registrars is the entire teaching and supervising staffs of the public schools, numbering approximately 3,400, the District branch of the American Legion, Board of Trade, Junior Chamber of Commerce, and similar groups.

Also requested to canvass for volunteer workers among their employes were department stores, including Woodward & Lothrop, Palais Royal, Jelleff's, the Hecht Co., Julius Garfinckel & Co., and Kann's. All local newspapers likewise were called upon.

Upward of a dozen automobile, jewelry and clothing firms had voluntarily signified their willigness to assign all or parts of their personnel to speed the local draft machinery.

In his letters to Federal department heads, Holmes asked for employes who would fill the following requirement: Unquestioned patriotism, the ability to interview, and easily legible handwriting.

Holmes' appeal came on the eve of the recommendation of nearly 200 Washington citizens to the Commissioners for the key local board positions. Seventy-two members for the 24 three-man boards will be selected by the District government heads from those recommended by Gen. Cox. Their appointment is subject to White House approval.

Anxious Phone Calls Here Swamp Draft Quarters

More than ever these days, the telephones jingle at Selective Service Headquarters, Twenty-first and C streets northwest.

"Selective Service?" come the voices, and then:

"I'll be 21 on October 16, Registration Day . . . does that get me in?"

Or "My thirty-sixth birthday is the 16th . . . am I defferred?"

These are among calls that swamp the phones at conscription headquarters. These are the answers the legal experts on the 125-employe staff furnish the prospective draftees:

"Paragraph 201 (a) of Section 9, Volume 2, of the Selective Service Regulations, reads 'every male . . . who, on the day or days fixed for the first or any subsequent registration, is between 21 and 36 is subject to selection, . . . in other words, 21 to 35, inclusive.

"This means that if your twenty-first birthday is on (or before) the 16th, then you are draft material. If your twenty-first birthday is on the 17th, you are not.

Army Opposed To Censorship, Grogan Says

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 2.—The War Department's opposition to censorship was voiced today by Lieut. Col. Stanley J. Grogan, of the general staff press section.

GROGAN

The Army, Col. Grogan declared, thinks that censorship "is very often worse than that which it attempts to prevent."

He praised American newspapers for "a magnificent service in the national defense effort," and said that military officials believed the press would cooperate voluntarily with authorities in such a way as to make censorship unnecessary."

Before the Overseas Press Club at the World's Fair, Col. Grogan mentioned two topics still in the realm of "conjecture."

One was whether the War Department might use some opinion-polling service to measure public reaction to its operations.

The other was whether the present Army press organization "in a time of greater peril" might become part of a large Governmental public relations agency like the Creel Committee on Public information in the World War."

Cleveland, Oct. 2 (AP).—Winthrop Rockefeller asked the National Recreation Congress tonight "how many of the million young men who will be called to the colors in the near future appreciate that a year's military service can and will be a real opportunity."

The 28-year-old bachelor is the grandson of John D. Rockefeller and is an executive of the Socony Vacuum Oil Co.

"We of conscript age," he told the convention, "must not lose sight of the fact that those same qualities which make a good soldier are the very qualities which also make good workers and good citizens."

He said he learned the dignity of labor by waiting table and cleaning rooms at school.

Boston, Oct. 2 (AP).—When an American Army division goes into the field, here's what the War Department plans to have the division chaplain take with him:

One 1¼-ton delivery truck with mobile public address system available for recreational and religious use for a gathering of 2,000 persons; a trailer containing a field desk with typewriter, filing cabinets locked for confidential records, field safe, portable altar, portable pulpit desk, mass kit with elements for celebration of the Catholic mass, communion kit with elements for Holy Communion (Protestant), container with hymn and service books, container with testaments, prayer books, bibles, rosaries, medals, chaplain's flag.

Boston, Oct. 2 (AP).—Asserting some conscientious objectors were planning a "mass refusal" to register for military selective service on October 16, Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, of the Boston area of the Methodist Church, asked them today to avoid jeopardizing the "rights the church has won."

In an article in the Zions Herald, independent Methodist weekly, he said:

"These should bear in mind that the church has already secured legal status for the objectors. They should understand that such resistance is likely to jeopardize the very rights the church has won."

Pro-Nazis Hold Defense Jobs, Dies Aide Says

By the Associated Press

Newark, N. J., Oct. 2.—A Dies subcommittee spokesman announced today that questioning of visitors to the German American Bund's Camp Nordland had disclosed hundreds of Nazi sympathizers employed in munitions, shipbuilding and other national defense industries.

Chairman Joe Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, made the charge in a public statement on conclusion of two days of public and private hearings. National leaders of the bund and State heads of the Ku Klux Klan had been called as witnesses.

During executive hearings, Starnes declared, more than a score of persons, "a cross-section" of 2,000 visitors to the Andover Bund Camp, were questioned and "without exception every witness was employed in defense work."

Evidence of Sabotage

The inquiry unearthed evidence of sabotage, Starnes continued, remarking he did not choose to reveal incidents because that might hinder Federal and local police inquiries.

Questioned later concerning the September 12 explosion at the Hercules Powder Co. plant in Kenvil, Starnes said he was "loathe to say anything about that because it might interfere with the F. B. I. investigation." The blast killed 51 and injured more than 100.

Stares asserted the "abundance of the testimony" showed the bund was an "agent of a foreign power whose sympathies and allegiance are to another government and its policies."

In an open hearing, August Klapprott, eastern department bund leader and manager of Camp Nordland, said the camp property was used by the Ku Klux Klan for a group meeting August 18 last and bund members attended as individuals.

Arthur Bell, who described himself as State grand dragon of the klan from 1923 to 1934, during which time he said peak klan membership was 300,000, said the purpose of the meeting was to "Americanize the bund."

"Did you think it was wise to hold the meeting?" Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, asked Bell, State organizer until three weeks ago.

"I did then," Bell replied. "I don't now."

Alton Monroe Young, who said he was a klan member for 40 years and a clergyman for that time also, testified he had arranged the meeting with Klapprott and was sorry now he had done so.

Col. C. C. Allen To Command Military Order

Service Group Elects Maj. Waggaman, D. C., Vice Commander

Col. Charles C. Allen, U. S. A., retired, of Philadelphia, yesterday was elected commander in chief of the Military Order of the World War, at a session closing the twentieth convention at the Mayflower Hotel. He succeeds Lieut. Comdr. Charles A. Mills, U. S. N., retired, of Miami.

In the final meeting the World War officers denounced "certain Governmental agencies and their officials" . . . (for the) "opportunity and protection afforded subversive and traitorous activities."

Hitting at "those of the type of Bridges Browder, Kuhn" the order went on record as "insistently urging the executive and legislative branches of the United States . . . to take vigorous and intensive action" against them.

Major Ennalls C. Waggaman, of Washington, and Lieut. Comm. Charles Hann, jr., of New York, were elected vice commanders-in-chief.

Other Washingtonians named to serve on the organization's general staff included Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, judge advocate general; Col. J. M. Heller, surgeon general; Maj. A. A. McCallum, chaplain general; Lieut. Col. Edwin S. Bettelheim, jr., treasurer general, and Maj. James A. Lyon and John Lewis Smith, jr., members of the general staff. Maj. O. W. Clark, of Washington, was elected Third Corps Area commander-in-chief for the order.

Synagogues and Temples Crowded to Usher in Rosh Hashanah

Wishes for a happy and bountiful New Year mingled with devotions read from the sacred Machzar Book last night, as the faithful crowded synagogues and temples to usher in Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish year 5,701.

Initiating a 10-day penitent period, climaxed with Yom Kippur—Day of Atonement—the Maariv services were marked by simple meditations in most orthodox and conservative congregations, while devotions and sermons were heard in reformed temples.

The anniversary, the date of which is calculated from the world's creation, according to Hebrew legend, will be observed early today and tomorrow with the traditional blowing of the shofar (ram's horn) by cantors and by sermons from rabbis.

At the Washington Hebrew (Reformed) Temple, which holds a one-day celebration ending tonight, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld last evening advised that "the God of love and order is also the God of retribution," saying:

"When retribution comes we all share in it, the innocent and the guilty, for in the discipline of society, we are each other's witnesses, cursed by each other's wickedness, blessed by each other's virtues, ennobled and strengthened by each other's moral courage, and debased by each other's moral cowardice."

"Because God is a God of retribution, I face the future with hope," he said, predicting that Hitler would eventually find his "Gotterdamarung"—the "twilight of his power."

Rabbi Gerstenfeld will speak today at 10:30 a. m. on "Who Failed—Leaders or People." Members of the congregation will have a reception in the Temple library from 4 to 6 p. m.

Speaking last night at the Tifereth Israel (Orthodox) Synagogue, Fourteenth and Euclid streets northwest, Rabbi Harry Silverstone said he had "faith in God's hope for humanity" because of "irrefutable proof that the foundation of our life is the moral law of God and that this law proves that in life's scheme evil breeds germs of its own destruction." Cantor Charles Intrater conducted services.

Cantor Louis Novick led Maariv rites at Adas Israel (Conservative) Synagogue, Sixth and I streets northwest, and Rabbi Solomon H. Metz conducted devotions. The latter will preach today at 7:30 a. m. on "Fate or Destiny—Which?" and tomorrow at the same hour on "Whence Shall My Help Come?" A junior service is set for 11:15 a. m. today.

Among other Orthodox and Conservative groups holding Rosh Hashanah rites today and tomorrow will be Ohev Sholom, Beth Sholom, Southeast Hebrew Congregation, B'nai Israel and others. Services also are being held at the Hebrew Home for the Aged, and at the Hebrew Travelers' Sheltering Society and for Jewish patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Meanwhile, Beth Sholom Synagogue yesterday announced election of J. A. Kamerow as president of the Talmud Torah, its school. Kamerow is a student of the Talmud and Jewish learning. The broadening of the curriculum includes a high school course in Jewish and Hebrew culture for advanced students, preparatory for Rabbinical seminaries, under the direction of Rabbi Moshe H. Levinson, spiritual leader of the congregation. Adolph Vygoda, internationally-known cantor now connected with Beth Sholom, will teach liturgical music. H. Kaminitsky is principal.

Army to Bury Air-Crash Victim

Corpl. Robert C. Schmitz, United States Army Air Corps, who with Brig. Gen. Francis W. Honeycutt and Capt. George F. Kehoe lost his life September 20 in an airplane crash in swamplands near Woodbine, Ga., will be buried today in Arlington National Cemetery.

At Fort Bragg, N. C., where Gen. Honeycutt had taken command only a week before, memorial services will be held in the chapel. The bodies of Gen. Honeycutt and Capt. Kehoe were not recovered from the demolished observation plane, buried deep in swamp waters.

Jones to Be Honored By Business Council

The Business Advisory Council will honor Jesse H. Jones, Secretary of Commerce, with a dinner tonight at the Mayflower Hotel, following a day meeting at which Secretary of the Navy Knox will speak informally.

It will be the first fall meeting of the Business Advisory Council and the first under Mr. Jones. The council advises the Secretary of Commerce on business problems and on Government-business relationships.

'Knute Rockne' Premiere Excites South Bend

Football Film Opens at Earle Next Week; Biographical Drama of Mary Todd Lincoln Written by Catholic University Student

By Richard L. Coe

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

THAT CURIOSA AMERICANA, the super-gigantic-colossal motion picture premiere, is currently routing the Hoosiers of South Bend from their beds, pulling them to the sidewalks to watch the great go by. There was a barbaric day when one night was considered sufficient to welcome filmland's ultimate achievement, but this week—all of it—is set aside for the Nation in general and South Bend in particular as Knute Rockne Week to herald the Brothers Warners' football film, "Knute Rockne—All American."

To be sure, these three days are called "the climax" of the gala week, being a gradual acceleration for Friday's four-theater premiere. Tonight Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., will deliver a personal message from the President to Mrs. Bonnie Skiles Rockne, widow of the great Notre Dame football coach. Postmaster General Walker will attend and be introduced on a special radio program by Bob Hope.

Pat O'Brien, who plays the title role in the widely-heralded film, will head the list of film players in attendance, a group that will include Ronald Reagan, Donald Crisp, Gale Page, Jane Wyman and—James Cagney.

Notre Dame officials also will welcome seventeen surviving members of its football team of 1913, which was captained by Rockne. Amos Alonzo Stagg, whose College of Pacific team plays Notre Dame on Saturday following Friday's four openings, will also be on hand, as will the Governors of eight States.

"Knute Rockne—All American" arrives at the Earle a week from tomorrow and with such an inspiration as the great "Rock" it seems reasonable to expect something more than just another pigskin epic.

AS AN UNSUCCESSFUL PLAYWRIGHT whose most promising unwritten play deals with Mary Todd Lincoln, this reporter had an evening of deep interest when the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University gave a reading of Edith Mirick's drama "Storm."

Mrs. Mirick has written a biographical drama tracing Mrs. Abraham Lincoln from girlhood to tragic old age. Her nine scenes, still in the "at work" period, are vignettes much like those employed by Laurence Housman in his Victoria series, some of which Helen Hayes played as "Victoria Regina." Each scene is a playlet in itself, but is linked by a definite growth with those which have gone before.

It was Robert E. Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" which inspired this Washington poet to attempt her first play. She was deeply dissatisfied with the necessarily hazy portrait in the Sherwood play. When she had completed her first draft, she recognized her lack of experience. She joined the classes at Catholic University's provocative Speech and Drama Department determined to iron out her troubles. Walter Kerr, Father Gilbert V. Hartke's acute associate, has encouraged her with his catching enthusiasm.

The result is a play of genuine promise. The problem of focusing audience attention on a second figure while Lincoln is on the stage is squarely faced. The difficulty of spanning many years but in still maintaining audience interest has been another difficulty to conquer. That there is not a large cast makes it a potential vehicle for our increasing "Little Theaters."

"Storm" will be the second production of the department's season, getting on the boards in December. Who will have the exacting part of Mrs. Lincoln is still anyone's guess, but there are rumors from an interested Hollywood studio, a studio which might like to know that here is a rich and demanding role.

JOTTINGS: Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brennan check out of the Carlton today, but we'll see them before they go or else. They were Capitol Hill habitues yesterday . . . The muchly censored "Baptism of Fire" episode, which has been added to "The Rambparts We Watch" since it opened here, is contained in the version running today and tomorrow at the Uptown . . . Helen Forrest, coming to the Capitol stage today as a radio songstress who has been featured with Benny Goodman, will be on home grounds. She made her stage debut on the same spot several years back in one of Gene Ford's early "Going Native" revues . . . Glenn Miller, in his last day at the Earle, hosted fifty Sigma Nu brothers to one of his Tuesday night performances. He was an S. N. while at the University of Colorado. Which is a good word for the U. of Colo., for he's a most intelligent unaffected young man . . . Gloria McGehee, daughter of Representative Dan R. McGehee is to christen a new destroyer in Alabama shortly, thus bringing about a revised shooting schedule for that film of the young localites, "Hello America."

Don't Bother With the Bill—Sing for Your Supper!

ROBERT CUMMINGS AND DEANNA DURBIN

While the supper check seems to be a center of attention in "Spring Parade," these young people need only be entertaining to appease the management. This new film, Miss Durbin's eighth to play the Fifteenth street house, opens at RKO-Keith's tomorrow morning

New York, Oct. 2.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in the history of these functions, neither the Italian Ambassador nor the Italian Consul-General will be invited to attend the Columbus Day dinner in New York . . . Vincent Sheean will return from Europe via the Clipper. He's been in Lisbon, awaiting his turn for accommodations . . . Leo J. Rosett, the Labor Party's designee for Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals, sent a letter of declination to Albany Monday night . . . Orson Welles' one-man record—of writing, directing and acting in his own production—is being surpassed by young Ezra Stone. Young Ezra, who portrays a schoolboy in the Aldrich Family radio series, matched Welles' accomplishments, and in addition is building his own movie theater in Philadelphia.

JOHN BARRYMORE visited the Universal studio to see Eddie Sutherland, who was busy directing "Caribbean Holiday." Sutherland will direct Barrymore's new picture, "Invisible Woman" . . . John was surprised and delighted to meet Mary Boland there, and insisted that the cameramen photograph them together . . . "Why, John," Miss Boland coyly protested. "If I pose with you, I'll be ruined" . . . Only in some circles," Barrymore grimaced, "In others, you'll be made."

FOR A NUMBER OF YEARS the American Composers Alliance—an organization of serious composers whose membership includes Virgil Thomson, Aaron Copland and Harvard's Prof. Walter Piston—has been unable to secure affiliation with A. S. C. A. P. The current B. M. I.-A. S. C. A. P. dispute now is benefiting the Alliance, which finds itself being wooed by both A. S. C. A. P. and B. M. I. . . . Gen. Watson, the President's secretary, has an unusual way of reminding himself of things he wants to do on the following day, if he thinks of them while attending social functions. Gen. Watson sends a wire to himself at his office. The next morning that reminder-wire is on his desk . . . Fritz Mandl, the munitions and shipping magnate who left with his family for South America months ago, will return here alone on October 16.

HARPO MARX, whose innocent slumbers never have been disturbed by any dreams, was shocked recently when he experienced the remarkable novelty of having a dream. He dreamed that he left his house, then returned to the garage, and found his car stolen. The next night Marx had the same dream. When this dream was repeated for the third successive night, Harpo sought an interpretation by a famous diagnostician who is his friend . . . The physician listened patiently, while Harpo described the dream—of going to the garage, and discovering that his car had been stolen . . . "Now what do you make of it all, doctor?" asked Harpo, eagerly expecting a discourse upon Freud and the subconscious . . . "The way I interpret it." replied the doctor, solemnly, "you're just afraid of losing your car."

Little Revives Sacha Guitry's Tour-de-Force

'Story of a Cheat' Retains Its Unique, Impudent Humor

One of the films' rarest qualities is that its infinite variety can be captured again and again. Time may pass, but a good film, an amusing film, a human film, always remains the same. Thus it is that such a picture as "The Story of a Cheat" can amuse long after the land which gave it birth has passed into less witty hands.

The Little is currently reviving this Sacha Guitry tour de force. It appeared first nearly two years ago, but it remains the epitome of a civilized joke.

You may recall its story. M. Guitry has conceived a sad young chap who is punished for theft by being forbidden mushrooms at a family dinner. But the mushrooms were toadstools, everyone who ate them died and the dishonest youngster discovered that his theft had saved his life. From then on, life is a serious problem of when to be honest, when to cheat. When he tried purposely to cheat, he failed; when he tired to be honest, people suspected him of cheating. Finally he decided to be a cheat and failed!

John Erskine Subtitles

Told with smacking good humor and unexpected charm, this one-man tour-de-force is a rare treat. Written, directed and acted by this talented son of one of an older France's great actors, the story is narrated by Guitry himself in a curiously striking technique. He tells all and doesn't let any of his characters slip a word in edge-wise.

John Erskine wrote the titles for this American version of the made-in-Paris celluloid, subtitles which manage to carry much of the sting of the Gallic original. The supporting cast is headed by one-time Mme. Guitry, Jacqueline Delubac. Serge Grave is memorable as the villain-hero's boyhood self. But of them all, in his half-dozen disguises, Guitry is the delirious tops.

If you've not seen it, you've got something to look forward to. If you have, you'll find a return visit highly amusing.

Gayety

"BURLESQUE PARADE." Margie Hart headlines the incoming Gayety Theater production opening its week's engagement Sunday afternoon. Stinky and Shorty and Scratch Wallace handle the comedy and Ramona, Delores Green, Dorothy De Haven and Mickey Pearl are the chief supporting figures. Georgia Sothern continues her frolics through Saturday's midnight performance.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 2.

Since the collapse of France, Mary Garden's friends, who are legion, have been much concerned about her, because the last news they had was that she was over there running a dramatic school. Now they will be delighted to hear that she's in Scotland with her sister, and has inherited a fortune from her father, as did her sister. Yet for many years, when she was selling pearls one by one and thought her father was broke, she was taking care of him at the Mission Inn in Riverside because he loved it so. Mary's made and spent many fortunes, but never ceased being good to her pappy, who kept hoarding everything he got. And the most surprised person in the world was Mary when he died, leaving her a fortune. This idea may give our Hollywood fathers something to do.

HOPPER

Bette Davis had planned to motor from New York, but she's having so much fun with ex-husband Ham Nelson back there she'll stay on until the last minute and take the streamliner home. When she was romancing with Bob Taplinger, I predicted that she'd remarry Ham in five years. It may be a long wait, but I still believe it.

Last Sunday Myrna Loy was interested in a group of boys who were busy around a camera at the foot of her hill, so went down to investigate. Stood behind, watched, listened to them use technical expressions like "Ready!"—"Shoot!"—"Cut!" They were having a grand time making their own movie, and never knew that one of our biggest stars was standing by watching them.

Seems the quarrel which Myrna and Arthur Hornblow had was all over a design for living. Myrna, being a frugal person, thinks that with so many needy in the world, one house is enough. Arthur being a producer, wants more. They have one in Coldwater Canyon, another in Palos Verdes, a third at Malibu Beach.

If you've listened to Irene Rich's "Dear John," you may have wondered about the voice of Brice, the governess, and you'll be delighted to know it belongs to that excellent actress, Janet Beecher, who got the job, I hear, when Miss Rich wasn't looking or listening. And by the way, Irene will be a grandmother in real life next month.

Last Sunday the new Screen Actors' Guild show started off with Jimmy Stewart, Margaret Sullavan and Frank Morgan on the very spot where film history started in the making in 1911. And I was on hand to introduce some of those who helped make it—William Farnum, Mrs. Wally Reid, Mary Carr and Stuart Holmes.

Gene Tierney's father arrives today from Connecticut to try and straighten out his talented daughter's business affairs. Mr. Zanuck would like her to remain and continue with her picture career. Her father believes she needs a couple of good plays on Broadway. Just remember your commandments, Gene.

Jackie Cooper is wearing a mustache—his first—in one sequence for "Fighting Sons," and when asked what kind he preferred, he replied, "I'll be content with the one you gave Gable. Didn't that one kiss Hedy Lamarr and Claudette Colbert?"

Comedy and Music Dominate Incoming Week's Theater Bills

"STRIKE UP THE BAND," Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, June Preisser, Paul Whiteman and his orchestra are the central figures in the new musical film opening this morning at the Capitol Theater. The story concerns a group of high school musicians faced with cutting a niche for themselves after imminent graduation. "Our Love Affair" and "Nobody" are included in the musical numbers and there is also a burlesque on old-time melodrama. Gene Ford's "Four Star Final" stage revue will be headlined by June Forrest, radio singer who rose from the Capitol's first "Going Native" revue. The Radio Ramblers, Capt. Tiebor's Seals, the Reading Twins and the Rhythm Rockets are in the other spots.

Earle

"NO TIME FOR COMEDY," James Stewart and Rosalind Russell have the costarring roles in this screen adaptation of the S. N. Behrman comedy written for Katharine Cornell. The film version concerns a talented hayseed who became New York's leading high comedy playwright. After he marries a great actress he falls under the spell of a blonde whose specialty is inspiring artists to "better things." Genevieve Tobin, Charles Ruggles, Allyn Joslyn, Louise Beavers and J. M. Kerrigan are featured. "Affairs of 1940" on the stage features Grace and Nikko, dancers; Ed Roecker, singer; Charles Carrer with the Roxyettes in two new routines, and a new "Sing-a-Song-With-Mike" feature.

RKO-Keith's

"SPRING PARADE," Deanna Durbin returns to the Fifteenth street house in her eighth film, reuniting again the trio of four years ago which made "Three Smart Girls" such a fabulous surprise: Miss Durbin, director Henry Koster and producer Joe Pasternak. The story is a light romance of Old Vienna and prompted The Post's Hedda Hopper to utter words of high praise yesterday morning. The music is by Vienna's Robert Stolz. Robert Cummings, S. K. Sakall, Henry Stephenson and Mischa Auer are in the supporting cast. There's also a new Walt Disney cartoon, "Window Cleaners." Opens tomorrow morning.

Palace

"FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT," International intrigue in the Hitchcock manner will continue for a second week at the Palace. The story of this one concerns an American newspaper man sent to Europe in the summer of 1939 to cover what looks like a serious situation. His adventures have typical Hitchcock suspense. Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, George Sanders, Herbert Marshall and Albert Basserman head the cast.

Metropolitan

"THE HOWARDS OF VIRGINIA," Cary Grant and Martha Scott continue in this sweeping story of the Revolutionary War period in the tidewater. Much of the film was filmed in Williamsburg. Richard Carlson, Alan Marshall, Paul Kelly and Rita Quigley are in the cast. Adapted from Elisabeth Page's novel, "The Tree of Liberty."

Columbia

"BOOM TOWN," Chalk up a fifth week on F street for this star-studded action tale of oil fields and the men they make rich. Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert, Hedy Lamarr, Frank Morgan are in the cast. Has already had three weeks at the Palace and tomorrow begins its second at the Columbia.

Trans-Lux

"INFORMATION PLEASE." Ruth Gordon is the guest victim of this release topping the short subjects at the newsreel theater. "Andre de La Varre travels to France's "Savoy in the Alps"; Willie Hoppe is "Master of the Cue" and the color cartoon spoofs "Romeo in Rhythm." Opens tomorrow morning.

Open-Air

"HELL'S HOUSE." Bettie Davis and Pat O'Brien are the stars of the auto theater's revival opening a three-night run this evening on the Richmond Highway. The associate feature is "The Divorce of Lady X," with Laurence Olivier and Merle Oberon. First showing goes on at 7 p. m.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 2 (INS).—You can never tell in this town of ours when a star will be born. That's what makes Hollywood so interesting and such a beacon light of hope for the youngsters. Now it's Peggy Moran, who was Joe Pasternak's heart-beat for so long and who was discovered by him. Peggy has been going along playing just atmosphere and bits. Today she was put into the femme lead in "Trail of the Vigilantes" opposite Franchot Tone and a lot of other high-powered names as Warren William, Broderick Crawford, Mischa Auer and Andy Devine. The whole company, including Alan Dwan, the director, takes off in a few days for the high Sierras.

PARSONS

Tony Martin should be happy this morning because not only can he hold hands with his new heart-throb, Lana Turner, every night, but they'll be working in the same picture when "Ziegfeld Girl" starts tomorrow; of course, Tony will do his movie love making to Hedy Lamarr—but is that bad? What a cast M-G-M is lining up for this Bob Leonard production, with Hedy, Lana, Tony, Judy Garland and John Shelton in the top spots. Chorus girl stock should go booming, too, because Bill Brady is already searching high and low for beautiful girls who are "like a melody" as one of the old Ziegfeld songs had it.

Chatter in Hollywood: The unpredictable Errol Flynn, without saying a word to anyone, boarded the Clipper last eve and went to Honolulu taking with him his house guest from Brazil, Lili Damita, who is undoubtedly a very wise young woman, sent him on his way with her blessing, knowing that he'll have to be back in a couple of weeks. He'll then go into "Footsteps in the Dark," murder mystery story which we told you some time ago will be Errol's next. It is his first modern in a long time and it is a mystery with plenty of comedy.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Word has been received that Herbie Kaye, Dorothy Lamour's ex, and a Texas widow were married three weeks ago. Dorothy says she knows of the marriage but not the bride's name; Mrs. Frank Borzage dining at the House of Murphy with Jeffrey Gill, former cafe entertainer, and Neville Fleeson; Judy Garland loses her tonsils today; Lucille Ball is house hunting but she denies it means a marriage to Desi Arnaz; Mrs. Eddie Robinson making the photographers happy posing with a statue that resembled Eddie at the Ross Shattuck exhibition; Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell kept open house last Sunday from 5 p. m. to 5 a. m.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Nazi Tactics

The hoodlums who have taken to hurling eggs, tomatoes and articles of furniture at Wendell Willkie's campaign procession in several cities have injured their own cause far more than that of the Republican nominee. For their attempts to embarrass an opponent by throwing missiles at him are a typical Nazi reaction.

President Roosevelt has properly rebuked the fanatical fringe among his followers who have stooped to that reprehensible type of opposition. His move to discharge the Federal employe who threw a metal wastebasket out of a window, seriously injuring a girl trying to obtain Mr. Willkie's autograph, is particularly in order. There should be no place in the Government service for anyone who has so little respect for our Bill of Rights.

Mr. Willkie recently repudiated the bigots attempting to identify themselves with his campaign. Now Mr. Roosevelt has castigated the missile throwers who seem to resent any opposition to his third-term candidacy. Both inicidents will help to keep the Presidential campaign on a higher level. But the epithet hurlers are still going strong.

In some respects campaign orators who resort to mud-slinging, to smearing tactics and malicious innuendo are a much greater menace to democratic institutions than are those who pelt tomatoes at a candidate. For their tactics are usually more effective than the obviously disgusting work of isolated hoodlums. Yet both practices stem from the same mental attitude, and it is the attitude which the Nazis cultivate.

The really dangerous factor is the unwillingness of these individuals to tolerate any opposition. When their opinions are challenged they respond by attempting to smear the opponent with over-age eggs or unwarranted invectives. They attempt, like Fascists of any stripe, to settle issues by smashing their opponents. It is precisely that spirit which leads to the one-party system and dictatorial control.

At bottom it is also this ruthless contempt for opposition, far more than the mere pelting of eggs or even epithets, that endangers our democratic institutions.

Tangled Controversy

Yesterday's hearing before a special House subcommittee merely added another knot to the long accumulating tangle over the District-Virginia boundary line. If the fixing of a boundary is to turn upon what jurisdiction shall tax gasoline at the Washington National Airport, hope of a settlement seems remote indeed.

The one virtue of the bill which this group reported back to the House District Committee is that it would draw a line of convenience between the District and Virginia. That line would be located at the mean high-water mark on the Virginia side of the Potomac. But it seems more than a little curious to draw a line of convenience which bisects the new National Airport.

Since the Government has acquired virtually all the land on the south shore of the Potomac opposite the National Capital, a line of convenience at the water's edge might involve no actual loss of control over that area. Nevertheless, it should be recognized that this proposal makes a substantial concession to Virginia. Certainly that State could well afford, in return, to agree to a line running west of the National Airport, if that should be found to be desirable.

The controversy serves once more to emphasize the short-sightedness of the officials who permitted the receding of Arlington County to Virginia. That area is now very definitely a part of Greater Washington. The Government has even begun to erect temporary office buildings in Arlington. Undoubtedly much of the city's future growth will be in that direction. Yet development of that area is, for the most part, under control of Virginia rather than the Federal Government.

In the circumstances the most that can be anticipated is a reasonable settlement of the boundary dispute involving the southern shore of the Potomac. Whatever the terms of that settlement may be, the paramount interests of the Capital in the adjacent area across the river should certainly be recognized and protected.

Admission Of Failure

It must be an extremely unpleasant experience for Germans to be informed, as they are now being informed by their press and their leaders, that they are in for another winter of war.

That bitter pill is, of course, being heavily sugar-coated. Great emphasis is being placed on British weakness and German invincibility. As the attacks by the German air force on enemy objectives continue, the German people are assured, British nerves and British economy will break down and British military strength will ebb away. Ultimately, as a result of this prolonged siege, "General Hunger will march against England herself," as one military spokesman put it.

In substituting "General Hunger" for the German army as the invading force, the Nazis are admitting that a real invasion of the British Isles is out of the question for the time being. The long-heralded blitzkrieg is now to be replaced by a war of attrition.

There can be no doubt that in such a war of attrition severe hardships will be inflicted on the British. In the third week of September, for instance, British shipping losses amounted to 131,857 tons, the highest for any week since the war began. That toll is even higher than the weekly average losses in April, 1917, at the peak of unrestricted submarine warfare. If continued at such a high rate, these sinkings may, before many months, leave Great Britain in a very parlous plight, particularly if the German aerial assault on England proceeds uninterruptedly.

All this, however, is scant comfort to the Germans. In the first place, Great Britain has the resources of the Empire, the United States and the rest of the overseas world to draw upon to make good some of her losses. And since, in such a war of attrition, Germany as well as Great Britain will suffer, these outside resources may tip the scales against the Reich.

Day after day, British bombers visit Berlin, which the German people were long told was an impregnable city. Every day they blast German factories, power plants, harbors, gasoline reserves and airfields. These raids are unmistakable evidence to the Germans that the enemy has not been weakened, that the war is not one-sided, and that a German victory is anything but certain.

It helps little for Germans to be told that Great Britain is a beleaguered land, slowly starving to death. They know that is descriptive of Germany, too. What makes the situation particularly bad for German morale is the fact that the breath-taking speed with which the victories over Poland, Norway, the Low Countries and France were won has not conditioned the people for a long struggle.

It is not surprising, then, that Hitler found it necessary, lacking a military victory, to give his harassed people something that might be dressed up to look like a diplomatic triumph—the triple alliance with Italy and Japan.

It Merits A Hearing

More than three weeks have elapsed since the House passed the District reorganization bill. Yet the Senate District Committee has taken no other action than to refer the legislation to a subcommittee for public hearings.

Because of illness, Senator McCarran, chairman of the subcommittee, has been unable to hold the hearings. Representative Kennedy, author of the House bill, has suggested both to Mr. McCarran and Chairman King of the Senate District Committee that another member be designated to conduct the inquiry. This request is reasonable and ought to be granted.

Members of the House District Committee, in a tribute to Mr. Kennedy on Tuesday, reiterated complaints that service on the committee is a thankless task which often reacts unfavorably against Congressmen in their home districts. Representative Kennedy stated that a misunderstanding over a minor District bill of which he had charge cost him enough votes in Baltimore to bring about his defeat for renomination.

Enactment of the Kennedy reorganization bill, in addition to modernizing some parts of the antiquated District government, would relieve members of Congress of many trivial legislative duties of which they propertly complain. Even members of the Senate District Committee, who seem less concerned than their House colleagues over the dangers of service to the National Capital, should welcome this relief.

Members of Congress were amused when it was disclosed by the House Committee on Revision of Laws that the District Code contains an obsolete statute which makes the King of England the final court of appeal for Washingtonians. Of course, the law has been inoperative since the Revolutionary War, but it has been carried in the District Code up to the present.

The District government in some respects is almost as obsolete as this statute. The Kennedy bill, while it falls far short of giving Washington the type of local government it should have, nevertheless contains enough desirable improvements to justify a special effort to bring about its passage. Continued delay in reporting it to the Senate serves only the purpose of those few individuals who would rather see no change than one which threatens the status quo.

Helping Themselves

News of a projected conference between Argentina and Brazil to facilitate the exchange of surplus commodities is a reminder that the countries of Latin America are not relying entirely upon the United States to solve trade problems created by the European War. They are actively investigating opportunities to expand and strengthen their trading contacts with one another.

For many Latin-American countries the outlook for expansion of trade with nearby neighbors is more promising than in the case of the United States. For example, Argentina, whose exports compete with ours, ships about 50 per cent of her exported wheat to Brazil. The latter country also offers promising outlets for Argentina's fresh fruits. And in return Argentina needs Brazil's lumber, cotton seed oil, coffee and cocoa. In short, a large volume of complementary trade can be fostered to the advantage of both countries.

There is a great deal of other evidence that the countries of Latin America are actively seeking to help themselves. A conference of the River Plate countries has been called. Argentina and Chile have also engaged in discussions of their trade problems, while a Brazilian mission has visited quite a number of nearby countries with the object of developing new export outlets.

Trading in many parts of Latin America is hampered by lack of transportation facilities. But better communications are certain to be provided in proportion as the opportunities for profitable exchange of goods are realized.

The heightened interest in trade promotion among our southern neighbors is, therefore, most encouraging. It will not only help to solve the problem of surpluses; it will doubtless also stimulate development of existing resources and create demands for more and better transport facilities. And through closer contacts will come the better understanding essential to effective international cooperation.

Fiasco At Monterrey

In taking office as President of Mexico last month, Gen. Avilo Camacho surprised many by coming out with a strongly conservative statement. He flatly declared that no Communist would have any part in his administration. He also professed himself a good Catholic and promised, as one report put it, "to dedicate as much care to the spiritual as to the economic needs of the Mexican people."

If this volte-face by the candidate of the left-wing groups in Mexico was designed to cut the ground from under the Almazanistas, it does not appear to have been wholly successful in doing so. On Tuesday an uprising broke out in Monterrey where a group of plotters, headed by Gen. Verastegui, tried to seize the city in the name of Camacho's Presidential rival, Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan. The seizure of the city, it is said, was to be the signal for a general uprising in the province of Nuevo Leon, in which Monterrey is situated.

The attempted coup appears to have been amateurishly handled. For instance, the plotters sought the aid of the chief of police of Monterrey without first making certain that he was loyal to their cause. Instead of working with them, he acted to thwart their plans. The uprising was speedily put down.

This development may discourage other followers of Gen. Almazan from taking to the warpath, particularly since it revealed the fact that the army is loyal to the Camacho regime.

Exposing Propagandists

The existence on American soil of organizations that are controlled by foreign governments and used to propagate foreign ideologies constitutes a very real danger to our national security, particularly at a time like the present.

To counteract this menace, some have argued that laws should be passed outlawing organizations under foreign control. Such a move, however, would be so at variance with established custom and with the Bill of Rights that it has been strongly opposed. Yet the problem raised by the existence of foreign-controlled organizations cannot be ignored. The Senate has taken at least one step in the right direction by passage of a bill compelling such organizations, notably the Communist Party and the German-American Bund, to disclose their membership and the sources of their finances.

Since the measure has already met with the approval of the House, although in slightly different form, its final passage can be taken for granted. It will throw the white light of publicity on organizations that operate best behind the cover of darkness. Only those political groups which make a secret of their membership and financial backing to conceal subversive plots and propaganda have anything to fear from a law of this sort.

Eleventh-Hour Awakening

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having awakened to the frightful peril surrounding us, let us peace-loving Americans, who have slept so long, be as St. Paul among the Apostles—the last to be converted, but by far the most energetic of all. Our eleventh-hour awakening, if it be genuine, must release such energies in our hearts and souls as we have never known before, making us surpass ourselves and all that we have ever been or done.

Seeing the vast part of this earth which the Commu-Nazi-Fascists have already within their grasp; seeing that they have a far better organization than their victims, and a far more determined spirit; and seeing that treachery is their foremost means to their diabolical ends, we who call our freedom a priceless thing well worth saving must give up all hope of an easy victory and must prepare our national soul for a Calvary.

We who have been the world's most complacent people must come out of our dreams and face today's stark reality. And the name of today's reality is sacrifice, a sacrifice which has little resemblance to what is known as peace.

Moral Rearmament

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last Friday night I was walking down Ninth street and I noticed a soldier, who was obviously a recruit, panhandle a gentleman just ahead of me. This gentleman gave him some money and as I came by the soldier accosted me with a request for money. He gave no reason for his request nor any explanation of any sort.

Having served in the Army for four years, I realize fully how inadequate the pay is, but it still made me furious to see any man in the Army uniform panhandling. This man was probably a "raw" recruit, but regardless, or rather because of this, he should be restricted to his post until proper pride and respect for his uniform and all that it stands for is instilled in him. Such a man should not be permitted to tear down the respect and admiration that Army men as a group command wherever they may be.

Yet this incident is no worse than the one which occurred the next day. I went to the Saturday performance of "Foreign Correspondent." At the close of the picture the National Anthem is played, and I found myself and one other man to be the only people standing. Perhaps, it being part of the picture, there was no occasion to stand, but I feel that every American in that audience should have stood up.

What good are the billions of dollars being spent for national defense if Americans can sit calmly while their national anthem is being played? Surely to accomplish what we need right now will take more than the mere expenditure of a few billion dollars. J. L. C.

Dangers Of Corporate Management

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Westbrook Pegler in his column this morning, "The De Luxe Dole," almost justifies the omniscient halo which columnists sometimes try to wear.

He cites the "generosity of the bleeding heart of the New Deal with money intrusted to them to bail the country out of hock." Right alongside his column the talented Dorothy Thompson says: "The concepts and values cultivated by monopolistic big business lead logically to the Nazi form of world order. The American dream rejects it with the spontaneity with which a healthy organism vomits poison." Both are right.

Two years ago I wrote: "Corporate combinations are frequently found on the side of the pull toward the center. The free spirit of man is definitely devoted to free effort in a world as free as he can make it . . . The inevitable tendency of government is to take for its own use an increasing percentage of productive effort. This is the basis of the eternal conflict, so called, between industry and government. Rightly considered, it is not a contest between industry and government, but it is the conflict between the taxpayer, who is all of us, and the taxeater, who in increasing numbers tends to become an all-pervading number of us."

In the same volume I said further: "Vicarious generosity with the property of others is never to be condoned, approved or tolerated. It saps the moral fiber of a people, befouls their inheritance, grows upon their tolerance and, if persisted in, destroys them."

Just as the American system of free enterprise is opposed to one big corporation—whether called a totalitarian or socialized state—and just as our American political plan of a representative democracy is opposed to a dictatorship, so our immediate and ever-continuing public problem is: how to hold these two contradictory forces in balance so their eternal contests for power may not consume either our substance or our lives?

Examined closely, the errors and excesses of corporate management, which form such succulent morsels in the mouths of public officials, arise from the failure of men to observe and apply to their plans and operations the clear principles of fiduciary duties as trustees of the property of others temporarily in their charge. The same is true with respect to the manner and method of handling the immense affairs of government. Not only the funds of government, gathered in billions, but our liberties and our possessions of every kind and character, inherited from the toil and sacrifice of this and preceding generations of industrious and well-disposed men, are all trust assets of incalculable moral and material value. They are to be preserved intact by every one of us, always remembering that we are trustees, and that the first duty of a fiduciary obligation is: thou shalt not commit waste.

Those of predatory inclination are abroad in the land as never before in our history. Sometimes they seek purse and sometimes they seek power. It is against all such that society has ever had to fend, under whatever guise, or on whatever occasion, they may appear.

Insecticide of high fiduciary content, vigorously and copiously applied, is our only possible protection against these terrible termites.

NATHAN BOONE WILLIAMS.
Washington, Oct. 2.

On Presidential Terms

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A Senate judiciary subcommittee is now holding hearings with regard to the advisability of a Constitutional amendment limiting a President to a single six-year term. A vast majority of the persons who have testified so far before this subcommittee favor such a Constitutional amendment and are naturally vigorous in their protest against a third term for Mr. Roosevelt. Many of them constitute the conservative, die-hard, tradition-loving element of the Democratic Party that supported so wholeheartedly Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 against Mr. Hoover. They cried out then in one voice for Mr. Roosevelt to save them from revolution and ruin. And now, after the President has given seven years of fearless, matchless leadership, these professional "saviors of democracy" have the gall to malign the President for submitting to the overwhelming, thunderous approval of the American people.

It is amazing—if not revealing—that a majority of these one-term advocates are supporting Candidate Willkie for the Presidency. If their candidate is, as they plead, the "preserver of democracy" and the "only hope of the country," why not keep him for at least two four-year terms?

I do not know even one loyal Republican who is in favor of placing this Constitutional limitation on the tenure of Presidents. Naturally, the Republicans hope and expect to regain this highest office of the land for their own party. Eventually, they will. To accuse the Republicans of promoting the six-year-term amendment would imply wrongly that there is a complete lack of political astuteness among them.

I believe the Republicans prefer "unlegislated" democracy, even at considerable temporary sacrifice and inconvenience to their own party. The only workable limitation on the tenure of the Presidency is the one now in operation—the freedom of the American voters to use their common-sense judgment.

If a President is satisfactory to a great majority of the population, why limit him to a six or eight-year tenure? If a President is admittedly without statesman-like ability to administer unusual and unexpected executive duties, why make it mandatory that the people "endure" him for six years?

In my opinion the American people should be permitted to use their untrammeled intelligence not only with regard to reelection for a third term of a President but they should have also the privilege of "retiring" after two years' service a President who has proved himself unworthy and incompetent. Such power in the people's hands would contribute much to the continuous growth of an active, vibrant democracy.

CLAUDE S. SUTHERLAND.

Accident Prevention

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The astounding total of 57 injured in automobile accidents here recently, in a 24-hour period, shows the need of drastic action.

All of the "accident squads" in the land, running around with pillows and blankets for the wounded, cameras for on-the-spot pictures, and testing of brakes, will not solve the problem.

Let us have at once a law calling for mandatory three days in jail for each driver involved in an accident serious enough to send any person to the hospital. Then watch your accidents drop 60 per cent.

The Post Impressionist

Greenwich Village

DURING the twenty years I lived south of Fourteenth street in New York City, I frequently heard that Greenvich Village was dead, but I needed only to enter this region from other parts of the city to realize that the reports were what Mark Twain said of the rumor of his own death—greatly exaggerated. Cross Fourteenth street, going south, and the dullest cannot escape knowing that they have entered a quarter as distinct in its characteristics as any famous quartier of Paris. The gay sidewalk cafes maintained by Longchamps, the Fifth Avenue Hotel, the Brevoort, and Number One Fifth Avenue will alone tell the visitor that the region is different—even though many of their customers run to a comfortable uptown bourgeois plumpness.

In externals, Greenwich Village has changed, but so over the decades and generations has the Latin Quarter of Paris. When I lived in an old house on West Eleventh street just after the World War, people liked to say: "Bohemia is a state of mind." Memories were still very green of the Liberal Club on MacDougall street, where Frank Harris with a tumbler of whisky had lectured, of the birth of the Washington Square Players in the bookshop of the Boni brothers, and of the editors of The Masses who had made social revolution seem a debonair undertaking.

Polly's back-yard restaurant on West Fourth street had just moved to more pretentious quarters, but at Christine's, over the Provincetown Playhouse, one could see that picturesque pair, the anarchist Hypolite Havel, and the art critic, Sakakichi Hartmann, eat, drink and argue. Harry Kemp strode bareheaded around the Village; Eugene O'Neill still occasionally dropped in at Romany Marie's tearoom, and the Millay sisters were acting at the Provincetown Playhouse.

When I revisit the Village now, these places and people—most of them—are gone, but that does not mean that Greenwich Village is dead. Not even commercialism could blight it. Phoney tearooms have multiplied—and catch the Bronx trade, that is all.

Nor could the raising of rents that occurred after the Seventh Avenue Subway connected the Village with Wall street drive out the genuine Villagers. The stockbrokers moved into the new tall apartment houses, but the newspapermen, the painters, the civil liberties lawyers, the socialist teachers, the poets (very seldom wearing long hair) hung on tenaciously in the old houses. Where the intellectuals and the artists live, there will always be the spirit of the old Village, and the intelligentsia of New York still prefers to make its home between Fourteenth and Dominick streets.

In fact, Greenwich Village is today more of a Latin Quarter than ever before, because it is crammed with students. What the Sorbonne has been to the Quartier Latin, Washington Square College of New York University is to Greenwich Village. It floods the area with youth. Older in years but perhaps more ardent in quest of ideas are the thousands who flock each year to the New School for Social Research on West Twelfth street to hear lectures on everything from economics to theater arts. If I am not mistaken, intellectual ferment has always been associated with the state of mind known as Bohemia.

Come with me on a week-end trip to the Village. Do not, however, expect me to introduce you to wild women or to take you to a masquerade dance at Webster Hall or to point out human freaks. I do expect you, however, to know something about literature and painting and to have a bit more sympathy for the "macaroni" style than the Beau-Brummell style in dress and manners.

We will stop at the old Hotel Albert, on University place, and on the way I will point out the studio building on lower Fifth avenue in which I used to live. It is an old office building done over; a bookshop and a little movie theater share the street floor. You would never guess that above them are a finishing school and several small publishers, and above these a number of large dance studios with living quarters adjoining.

Here, in search of great big rooms, dancers have come, as musicians are drawn to Carnegie Hall for its music studios, and a glance at the building directory would at one time or another have shown the names of the following concert dancers: Ruth St. Denis, Martha Graham, Elizabeth Delza, Tina Flads, Elna Lillback, Polly Korchien, the Spanish dancer, Cansino, and others.

Just as deceptive from the outside is the Hotel Albert. The slummer would pass it by as uninteresting, but among its regular patrons are the painter, Niles Spencer, the mystery novelist, Dorothy Gardner, and the literary globe trotter, John Dos Passos. I have stepped into its elevator and found myself renewing acquaintance with John Gould Fletcher, Pulitzer Prize poet; I have sat in the lobby and noted General Krivitsky, famous for his expose of Stalin's Ogpu, in conversation with another Russian. Inconspicuous as the Hotel des Mines on the Boulevard St. Michel, the Hotel Albert is as authentic in its Latin Quarter atmosphere.

For dinner let's go to the little Italian restaurant south of Washington Square that the great sculptor, Gaston Lachaise, used to love. Ticino's, with sawdust on the floor, "red ink" stains on its linen, and low-priced cotoletto parmigiana, is in direct line with the old Italian restaurants, like Bertolotti's, that made the earlier Village famous. If I hadn't already oversprinkled this piece with names, I would mention some of the well-known literati like Sherwood Anderson who are wont to spend an evening at Ticino's in shop talk.

Perhaps you will be disappointed in Ticino's and in our call later at the apartment of an editor on West Ninth street where the talk of the group runs to world affairs rather than to sex, and in our Sunday morning breakfast at the Canary Cottage, which now appears to be the most popular morning rendezvous for Villagers. If so, it is not Greenwich Village, home of industrious journalists and art students, that you are looking for, but rather the tinseled stage version of Bohemia. You are, in fact, looking for fake, whereas the truth is—you can't go sightseeing in Greenwich Village; you have got to live there to know what its hidden community is like. GORHAM MUNSON.

On The Debunking Of History

IN RESPONSE to an article which was printed in this place some weeks ago I have received a letter from an official who occupies an important post in the educational system. "You indicate," he writes, "that 'no nation can live and remain a nation if the people in it cease to remember and no longer respect their own history.' For many decades it was the custom of textbook writers and even some historians to utilize only the virtuous in their historical and biographical writings. Lately we have been going through a period of 'debunking.' Do you mean to imply that we have to do less of the 'debunking' in order to bring about in our people respect for their own history? Putting it another way, do you think that teachers are justified in emphasizing the virtuous and minimizing the opposite aspects of our history in order to develop a more zealous admiration for our history?"

The question is important, and it can best be answered, I think, by examining a specific example of the "debunking" of American history. The example which I shall use is a book which was published in 1913. It is called "An Economic Interpretation of the Constitution of the United States" and it was written by Professor Charles Beard. This book has had an immense influence upon the writing and teaching of American history and upon the outlook of the generation that was educated in the interval between the two great wars. It would hardly be an exaggeration to say that this book is the classic which set the fashion for the debunking historians.

IN THE OPENING PAGES of his book Mr. Beard states the theory and outlines the method which historians ought, he believes, to adopt as "a guide to research and generalization."

"It will be admitted without controversy that the Constitution was the creation of a certain number of men, and it was opposed by a certain number of men. Now, if it were possible to have an economic biography of all those connected with its framing and adoption,—perhaps about 160,000 men altogether,—the materials for scientific analysis and classification would be available. Such an economic biography would include a list of the real and personal property owned by all of these men and their families: lands and houses, with incumbrances, money at interest, slaves, capital invested in shipping and manufacturing, and in State and continental securities . . .

"Suppose . . . that substantially all of the merchants, money lenders, security holders, manufacturers, shippers, capitalists, and financiers and their professional associates are to be found on one side in support of the Constitution and that substantially all or the major portion of the opposition came from the non-slaveholding farmers and the debtors—would it not be pretty conclusively demonstrated that our fundamental law was not the product of an abstraction known as 'the whole people,' but of a group of economic interests which must have expected beneficial results from its adoption? . . .

"Of course it may be shown (and perhaps can be shown) that the farmers and debtors who opposed the Constitution were, in fact, benefited by the general improvement which resulted from its adoption. . . . Nevertheless, it does not follow that the vague thing known as 'the advancement of general welfare' or some abstraction known as 'justice' was the immediate, guiding purpose of the leaders. . . . The point is, that the direct, impelling motive, . . . was the economic advantages which the beneficiaries expected would accrue to themselves first, from their action."

There in the words of its greatest practitioner is the reasoning by which history is to be debunked. It will be noted that Mr. Beard is not content to show that the men of property were on the whole in favor of the Constitution. That would be a truthful account of the facts. He goes further and insists that "the direct, impelling motive" of the authors of the Constitution was "the economic advantages which the beneficiaries expected would accrue to themselves first."

IN TAKING THIS, the debunking view, Mr. Beard claims that he is following "the political science of James Madison," who wrote in the Federalist that "from the possession of different degrees and kinds of property . . . ensues a division of society into different interests and parties." But where Professor Beard, the founding father of the debunkers, differs from James Madison, a founding father of the Constitution, is in the manner in which they respond to the obvious fact that there are diverse economic interests in every society. For Mr. Beard, the debunker, the fact means that everybody concerned with the Constitution was directly impelled by the expectation of economic advantages. For Madison the fact meant that "the regulation of their various and interfering interests forms the principal task of modern legislation." In Mr. Beard's view the Constitution is the instrument of certain interests; in Madison's it was the instrument for regulating the conflict of interests.

Mr. Beard's view is cynicism and Madison's is statesmanship. For the inwardness of the Constitution, and the cause of its enduring, is not that it expressed certain interests but that it regulated the many interests. Because Madison understood the bias of human selfishness, he was a realist and because he saw the necessity of transcending this selfishness and regulating it, he was the constructor of a great and enduring system of government. The cynicism of Beard is incapable of constructing anything: it invites a Madison to think not of a constitution but of his stocks and bonds; therefore he will not make a constitution. And it invites the people to believe that a Madison is thinking only of his stocks and bonds; therefore, they will not trust his constitution even if it were in their interest. This is how the debunkers have contributed to that moral nihilism, that paralysis of the will and disintegration of values which is the disease, the well-nigh fatal disease, of our society.

THE CRITICAL ERROR of Mr. Beard, and of the debunkers, is that they do not explain a great construction like the Constitution of the United States by making "a list" of the real and personal property, etc., etc., owned by Washington, Franklin, Hamilton, Madison, and the others. Thousands of men have owned land, ships, stocks and bonds who could no more have written the Constitution than they could have danced like angels on the point of a needle. Other qualities and other motives were required to write the Constitution, qualities of genius and of greatness which it is the duty of the historian to record, to appreciate, and to reveal.

For it is the presence or the absence of those qualities which makes all the difference between the times when a nation fails miserably and the times when it greatly succeeds.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Super-Byronic Hero

EDWARD TRELAWNY, who lives in all the literary histories as the man who snatched Shelley's burning heart from the funeral pyre and gave the blackened relic to the not altogether grateful widow, was an aristocratic gangster before he became the professional friend of poets and a good bit of a liar. He was a fantastic character and well deserves the careful and sympathetic study which Margaret Armstrong has given to him in "Trelawny" (Macmillan, $3), which is the Book-of-the-Month Club's October selection. But a reader may sometimes feel that Miss Armstrong is too civilized for her subject.

He was descendant of eight centuries of family-conscious Trelawnys of Cornwall, and perhaps he had in his veins something of that genuine folk-spirit which inspired one of his ancestors, and led an army of Cornishmen to march on London singing "And shall Trelawny die, three hundred thousand Englishmen will know the reason why!" But mostly, he was just a mean-tempered lad who hated his father, knocked down his schoolmaster, deserted from the navy, beat up a hated lieutenant, dislocating the officer's jaw, knocking out several front teeth and breaking two ribs, and then turned pirate, killing Chinese and Marattis galore. Or maybe he didn't do any of these things; the stories stand and fall on Trelawny's own narrative, written long afterward, when there were no survivors to check.

Miss Armstrong believes him, in the main. "There are no imaginary characters, events or conversations in this book," she says. "It is fact, not fiction. The narrative is based on Trelawny's writings, corrected and amplified from other sources." But the corrections and amplifications seem to apply exclusively to the later, and milder, chapters of Trelawny's life.

IT WAS A Byronic age, and Trelawny, in his own eyes, was a super-Byron, even before he met, and hated, the poet who broke all women's hearts. No Gothic romancer ever did better than Trelawny's account of his own first marriage. He was a lad not yet 20, commanding a squad of Arabs who, at dawn one morning, broke from their hiding places and rushed the mud fortifications of the Maratti slave raiders' capital, down in the Indian Ocean. There were Arab prisoners in the city, and it was Trelawny's job to set them free. But so busy was he killing the defenders "like rats" that he almost forgot his task. Meanwhile the slave raiders' women were sneaking from tent to tent, stabbing the bound and helpless prisoners.

Trelawny arrived "just in time." In an inner tent he found an Arab chieftain, flat on his back, bound and fastened to a stake driven into the earth. He was covered with blood, half dead, feebly warding off the attack of a vixen armed with a cocoanut knife. Trelawny caught the hag "by the twist of cloth about her waist, pulled her off, killed her and threw her away." A young girl was crouched at the dying chieftain's feet. Trelawny untied her hands and the chief's, and the old fellow, with a dying man's strength, pulled a ring from his own hand, put it on Trelawny's, joined his daughter's hand to the Englishman's, mumbled a blessing and fell back dead . . . It was an Arab wedding ceremony.

This was Zela, and in due time Zela died at sea, in Trelawny's arms, poisoned with syrupped nutmegs by a jealous Malay siren. And when Trelawny left Zela's trusted slave maid, Adoo, behind on another cocoanut island, Adoo swam out to sea after him and was drowned.

Back in England, Trelawny married a proper English girl, but apparently she was bored by his stories. She took another lover, and Trelawny divorced her. Later, in a cave on Mount Parnassus, he married the daughter of a Greek bandit general named Odysseus and named her child after Zela. When this wife insisted on dropping her native Albanian costume in favor of the conventional Western costume, Trelawny wreaked a terrible vengeance on her; he cut off her hair. She went home to her family . . . Long afterward Trelawny toured America, courting the great Fanny Kemble as he toured. Readers of Miss Armstrong's "Fanny Kemble" will remember him; Fanny liked him, but she married a man with more money.

When Trelawny was 40, 20 years away from Zela and the pirates, he wrote a sort of autobiography. Mary Shelley wanted to tone it down for him. "I strongly object to coarseness," she wrote, "now wholly out of date . . . Amidst so much that is beautiful and imaginative and exalting why leave spots which, believe me, are blemishes." Trelawny, fortunately, resisted, and his book became a classic of adventure, even if, like Joan Lowell, Trelawny may have spit to windward in some of his yarns.

Meanwhile, he had met Shelley, who, next to Zela, was the passion of his life. The story of that friendship is not only the best documented but the most moving and most creditable chapter in Trelawny's life. Shelley was a "fair, slight, boyish Ariel." Trelawny was a 6-foot-tall, swarthy pirate. He listened while Shelley read; he made Shelley exercise; he tried to teach him to swim. It was he who designed the ship from which Shelley was drowned; if he had been able to sail with Shelley on that last quick voyage Shelley might have survived. Trelawny was a sailor. It was he who consoled Mary Shelley afterward, who built the funeral pyre, who arranged for Shelley's tomb—and for a twin tomb for himself close beside it.

It is a gorgeous but hardly a civilized story. Miss Armstrong tells it with color and with a feminine intelligence and appreciation not always quite in key with her subject.

SENATOR ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE
Formerly an ardent foe of a third term for anybody, Senator La Follette has recently pledged his support to President Roosevelt. Possible reasons for such a shift are discussed by Mark Sullivan in his column today

Pattern Of Events

By Mark Sullivan

Faint Clew Of Things To Come

THERE ARE a few who claim to see the pattern of today's events, to see the relation of events to each other, and see the whole as having unity. Without doubting their sincerity, we can doubt the correctness of their vision. The greatest sincerity is often accompanied by defect of vision. Just where the forces arose that now rend the world, the differing directions these forces take, how they react upon each other, and especially the outcome, the final resultant—all that will be clear only after the passing of years

It is possible to pick out concrete factors, and see their direction. In the United States today are two such factors. One is ous increasing approach toward war, toward embroilment in the world conflict. The other is our coming Presidential election. How are these two related?

There is a faint clew in a local incident. In Wisconsin, Senator Robert M. La Follette indorses President Roosevelt for a third term. To a degree, this may be explained by the fact that Senator LaFollette is a candidate for re-election; he may feel that in the Wisconsin conditions, his chances would best be furthered by supporting Mr. Roosevelt.

BUT LOOK deeper. Here is a Senator who has been an outstanding opponent of a third term, for anybody at any time. It was he who, in August, 1927, introduced the resolution which said that the anti-third term tradition is "a part of our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time-honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our institutions."

Further, Senator La Follette was for neutrality, perhaps it would be tenable to say for isolation. He opposed President Roosevelt's change in the arms embargo, the change which made it possible for the Allies to get supplies from the United States. And here is Mr. Roosevelt by word and action strongly favoring help to the Allies before France fell, and Britain since. And here is Mr. Roosevelt's active running mate on the ticket, Vice Presidential Candidate Henry A. Wallace, taking a course which seems to make our Presidential campaign a contest between Roosevelt and Hitler.

CLEARLY, it is not Mr. Roosevelt's attitude toward the war that causes Senator La Follette to want him in office four years more. The reason must therefore lie in what Mr. Roosevelt is expected to do in the domestic field. Without imputing any motive to Senator La Follette specifically, it is this that leads many liberals, New Dealers and radicals to support the third term. Their minds are not mainly on what Mr. Roosevelt will do about the war, but on what Mr. Roosevelt will do in the form of change here in America.

What will happen, domestically, if war comes? The first step will be the organization of the United States in a manner not differing materially from the totalitarian organization of Germany, Italy and Russia. This organization for war purposes would occur in large part no matter who is President. It would be brought about for the sake of necessary efficiency in war, by either Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Willkie.

THE DIFFERENCE lies in what each would do at the end of war. Mr. Willkie could be expected to demobilize the wartime organization, to divest himself of war powers, as readily as President Wilson did at the end of the Great War.

Would Mr. Roosevelt do the same? Can we expect he would? Certainly those who have made Mr. Roosevelt's program so far, do not expect that he, at the end of a war, nor at any time willingly, would turn America back from the course of centralized authority. To the New Dealers who have already pushed America along this course, both the war and the third term spell opportunity.

The third term spells opportunity because it would be the destruction of what Senator La Follette once called "a part of our republican system of government." Destruction of this one part would be, to our people, a psychological dissolvent. It would undermine their resistance to further change. It would tend to create that intellectual daze and spiritual confusion in which the engineers of fundamental change could work. It would be the breaking of the first egg in the process by which the omelet of a new order could be achieved.

WAR WOULD be opportunity in the same sense in which it has already been opportunity. Before the war arose in Europe a year ago, America was engaged in correcting the excesses of the early New Deal. But with the approach of war to our own shores, this stopped. Had the war not come close to us, Mr. Roosevelt would hardly have attempted to remain in office; he himself put his acceptance of a third nomination on the ground of the menace of war.

The mere approach of war has accomplished this. The actuality of war would see the adoption of centralized authority to the last degree. Already this is clamored for. It is called "total war." Hardly any thoughtful person would hope that at the end of the war, if Mr. Roosevelt were President, the centralized authority would be demobilized.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

"I Prefer Willkie"

AS I SEE the issue, there is a choice between a Social-Democrat regime led by a strong adventurer and an attempt to reestablish the great American Republic under the management of a man who lacks experience in the job and is inclined to flounder. If President Roosevelt believed in the republican form of government he would be my choice over Wendell Willkie. But as between a strong and headstrong national boss who brings in a new batch of home-brew socialism every now and again and a believer in the republic who may be less ingenious and less forceful, I prefer Willkie.

Willkie might fail to make the republican form of government work. That failure might be due in part to lack of ability in the man himself and in part to the fundamental damage already wrought by the New Deal. The system may now be damaged beyond repair. But, anyway, Willkie would try to make it work, whereas it is very plain that Mr. Roosevelt wants to scrap it in favor of something of his own, improvised from month to month as he goes along.

THE DISHONESTY and civic immorality of the New Deal are important considerations, and the particulars in which the Administration has been dishonest and immoral must not be dismissed as mere personal smears. As a whole, the nepotism and exploitation of office for private enrichment, the nasty little clandestine deal in fake philatelic two-headed calves early in the game, the second Louisiana Purchase, the personalized revenge against individual opponents of the Administration, the collaboration of the New Deal with the political gangsters of Chicago, Boston, New York and Jersey City amount to a shockingly immoral career.

I am afraid the term "immorality" has come to mean unchastity, and that mention of morality is thought to refer to sex stuff and to smack of sanctimony. But I use the word in the larger and more important sense, believing that the New Deal has wantonly corrupted the civic morals of the people by engaging in and conniving at conduct which has harmed their citizenship. We observe the effect in the popular tolerance of acts which, by the proper and normal standard, would be condemned.

REMEMBERING how Mr. Roosevelt lay low in the campaigns of both 1932 and 1936 and, after his election, sprang surprises which had not been hinted at before, I anticipate that this time he and his busy little men will go much further. It is impossible to guess what he will do. But it must be assumed that he will regard the election returns as a final repudiation of the two-party system and the substitution of a one-party Government. His tendency would be farther to the left, and whether you say that socialism, communism or nazism lies to the left makes no difference. They all lie to the left of the American republican system and are all alike, except in little local peculiarities.

I think Willkie would try to revive private business, the only kind of business that can give healthy employment and save the republic. He is a friend of private business, and Mr. Roosevelt is its enemy. If private business does not revive, Government business will be the only business, and we will have the same kind of country, saving our national peculiarities, that the Germans, Italians and Russians are imposing wherever they can.

Willkie might fail. He might not be man enough; the job might be too big and the republican system may now be hopelessly damaged, and the burden of debt and unemployment may be too heavy for the axles.

But Mr. Willkie would try to save it, and Mr. Roosevelt has been consorting with those who say it isn't worth repairing and should be replaced by a new model.

Corporation Control

9,000,000 Own Stock

SENATOR JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY, chairman of the Temporary National Economic (Monopoly) Committee, declared yesterday that his committee was "not trying to prove any preconceived thesis" in receiving a report on control of the Nation's 200 largest nonfinancial corporations, disclosed yesterday in The Post.

The committee "is only seeking facts," O'Mahoney stated, as he released a summary of the hitherto secret report, impelled by what he termed "premature publication this morning of a story on the study."

O'Mahoney emphasized that the story, which pictured the duPont, Mellon and Rockefeller families as controlling huge shares of American industry, had not yet been passed upon by the committee.

The study of concentration of control in 200 nonfinancial corporations was prepared by the Securities and Exchange Commission under the direction of Raymond W. Goldsmith and Rexford C. Parmalee.

O'Mahoney's summary of highlights of the report disclosed that only 9,000,000 Americans, a much smaller number than generally believed, own corporation stock.

THE AVERAGE shareholder, the study found, holds shares in three different issues of stock and two and a half different corporations.

Half of all stockholders receive less than $100 annual dividends, while the group that lives mainly on stock dividends probably does not number more than 500,000 persons, the report set forth.

O'Mahoney's official summary set the total holdings of the duPont, Mellon and Rockefeller families in the 200 corporations at $1,400,000,000.

These families have considerable influence and often control, in 15 of the 200 corporations, the summary said. Thirteen family groups, of which these three are a part, were said to have holdings of $2,700,000,000, representing 8 per cent of the stock of the 200 corporations.

Foreign investors have considerable holdings in the 200 American corporations, the report summary stated.

Foreign influence was found to be heavy in the Shell Union Oil Corporation, Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation and the American Metals Co., Ltd., all playing a vital role in national defense.

Willkie Backs 'Sacrifices' for Britain

"Speak softly" and carry a big stick policy.

Saying the Administration at one time "was very proud" of the results of Munich conference, he ad libbed: "It's not so proud today and it would like to repudiate its action."

At the outset, he said he was telling "why we should change horses and get another one before we sink."

All day in talks through less friendly industrial centers he provided the prelude to this speech. There first he said that military alignment of Germany, Italy and Japan meant those powers were thinking of America "in terms of war."

He declared that America wants peace, no war, that it must build its defense hurridly to preserve peace, and it "must not rashly move" until it is prepared.

Tonight he elaborated on that argument and declared:

"Any man who involves us in risk of war while we are thus unprepared, betrays his country."

Declaring the Administration "lost precious time," allowed defenses to lag, and forfeited confidence, he outlined his own proposed defense moves "if you were to entrust to me the safety of America."

He said it is "terribly late" but he could promise "victory" if elected.

Willkie's train entered this weathervane State of Ohio just before noon after a last Michigan appearance at Adrian, where he gave the first hint of tonight's foreign affairs speech at Cleveland.

There, and again at Sylvania, Toledo, Oak Harbor, Sandusky and Elyria, Ohio, he criticized Mr. Roosevelt's conduct of foreign relations and said that as a result of "bumbling" the United States "has little influence in the world today.

Once again, Willkie was moving through predominantly Democratic territory—Ohio's industrial sector. The trackside throngs were large and friendly, but as Willkie motored through the factory districts of Toledo, he received another taste of aggressive hostility paralleling yesterday's booing at Pontiac and Flint.

Workers lined on the streets outside Toledo's Electric Auto-Lite Co., scene of the 1936 strike and now C. I. O. organized, loudly shouted their disapproval of Willkie. A tomato was hurled but widely missed. More loud booing occurred as he drove past the plant of the Spicer Corporation. There a large, crudely painted sign, "Roosevelt Forever," greeted Willkie.

But as the entourage proceeded through the Madison avenue center of Toledo the crowds cheered and a storm of confetti and ticker tape came showering down.

A crowd of more than 10,000 heard him presented by Gov. John W. Bricker and heard his Toledo indictment of the New Deal defense planning:

"We are without arms, ships and planes. We are without an administration that knows how to build any of those things."

Even in Cleveland, Willkie was in territory still rated Democratic. This city voted for Senator Bulkley, New Deal candidate, in 1938, although Senator Taft easily carried Ohio. One local street corner poll purported to show that Roosevelt's margin in the city of 3½ to 1 in a similar poll in 1936 had dropped now to 1½ to 1.

Southern and rural sections of Ohio are more heavily Republican. A State-wide sample poll conducted by the Columbus Dispatch gave Willkie an edge of 500 votes out of 10,000 cast, but State leaders of both parties concede that the Ohio contest is close. As in Michigan, the election here can still be won by either side.

Willkie this week has intentionally stumped the more hostile Democratic centers of both States, seeking to cut down Roosevelt majorities here before later returning to distinctly Republican territory.

Whether or not President Roosevelt's condemnation of missile throwing was effective, today was virtually without such incidents.

Members of the Willkie press party took consolation from announcement by local market dealers that this is the last week of the tomato season.

J. Edgar Hoover Entertains 400 Police at Reunion

Four hundred alumni of the National Police Academy were guests of J. Edgar Hoover at a reunion luncheon yesterday at the Hotel Mayflower. There were no speeches, the State and local law enforcement officers from all parts of the country having been brought together just to swap yarns and ideas.

While the N. P. A. alumni were enjoying themselves at the luncheon, their wives and daughters were holding a party of their own at the Hotel Shoreham with 175 in attendance.

Graduates of the police academy, which is conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, are in Washington this week to receive instructions in the detection and apprehension of spies and saboteurs. The session will close Saturday, when commencement exercises will be held for the academy class of 1940.

At the Red Cross Just Call 'Smith' —You'll Get Answer

The original John Smith no doubt would be proud of the part the Smiths of 1940 are playing in the work of the American Red Cross. At national headquarters here, 3 of the 12 executives answer to "Mr. Smith."

DeWitt Smith is director of domestic operations; George Smith is the purchasing officer and Don Smith is director of war service. There are other Smiths in miscellaneous positions.

The war relief work of the American Red Cross has necessitated expansion at the national headquarters on Seventeenth, between D and E streets, so that desks now occupy the corridors. The auditorium has been appropriated for the foreign relief operations, including the inquiry service.

A. F. L. Refuses to Indorse Either Presidential Candidate

Executive Council, at Meeting Here, Reaffirms Traditional Nonpartisan Stand; C. I. O. Likely to Remain Neutral

By the United Press

The American Federation of Labor, which claims more than 4,000,000 members, last night reaffirmed its traditional nonpartisan policy in the 1940 Presidential race.

The decision was made by the organization's executive council which also approved immediate publication and distribution among A. F. of L. officers and members of a pamphlet comparing the labor records of the Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates of the two major parties.

The Federation has departed from its nonpartisan policy only once and that was in 1924 when it backed the Presidential candidacy of Senator Robert M. La Follette, sr., Wisconsin Progressive.

The council's decision was not a surprise. The rival C. I. O. has taken no official stand on the race. President John L. Lewis predicted earlier this year that President Roosevelt would be defeated "ignominiously" if he sought a third term. Several of the largest C. I. O. unions, however, have indorsed the third term and are actively promoting it.

A. F. of L. President Green declined at a press conference last night to give his personal views on the rival candidates. He pointed out that A. F. of L. affiliates have a "perfect right" to indorse either of the candidates and that the parent organization would make no effort to prevent such action.

Meanwhile the unfriendly attitude which some Michigan persons displayed toward Willkie this week still was the subject of political discussion. Representative Roy O. Woodruff, dean of the Michigan delegation in the House, said that the egg throwing at Willkie and other incidents were traceable to the "preaching of class distinctions and the stirring up of class hatreds by the Roosevelt Administration."

The President yesterday denounced the demonstrations as utterly reprehensible and called on Michigan authorities to punish the offenders.

Civil Service Bill Conferees Agree

publican Representatives on the conference committee refused to affix their signatures.

Representative Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, denounced the measure as "the worst bill I've ever seen," and Representative Rees (Republican), of Kansas, said it gave "lip service to the cause of civil service." Attacking the measure because it fails to provide for competitive examinations, the two Republicans said they were strong for "a real merit system."

However, Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, the author of the measure, said he was confident the House would approve it and that it would become law within a few days. Representative Ramspeck smilingly remarked that reaching agreement on the bill yesterday was his way of celebrating the eleventh anniversary of his election to Congress.

Quota Limitation Removed

The conferees agreed to eliminate the House-approved Keller-Nichols amendment, which would have had the effect of temporarily denying benefits of the bill to residents of the District, Virginia and Maryland. It would have prevented any positions covered by the bill from being filled by residents of the States that have exceeded their quota, as long as any under-quota States remained.

"I am planning to go into the entire question of the quota next session," Representative Ramspeck said last night. "I would like to see the law amended so that when reductions are made in civil service posts, preference should be given to residents from under-quota States in order to bring the apportionment more nearly into balance." He also suggested extension of the quota-law to cover positions in the field as well as in the District.

The conference committee knocked out of the bill the Hatch amendment forbidding discrimination against jobseekers because they have not been graduated from particular schools or "accredited" institutions or because they do not belong to a particular association.

A prohibition against requiring photographs from job-applicants was agreed on by the conferees, with the provision that the Civil Serivce Commission can demand fingerprints as identification. This amendment had been introduced by Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, primarily to protect colored persons against discrimination. Photographs have been used by the Commission for some 25 years.

The conferees struck out a proposal that would have granted the benefit of the bill to some 4,000 furloughed Federal employes, particularly in the PWA, the HOLC and the USHA.

Another amendment, to allow classification of persons who have served 15 years or more in the Government, was eliminated. It would have affected several hundred employes.

However, the conferees retained the Senate amendment making the bill apply to clerks of members of Congress or of Congressional committees who have served four years or more, provided they can obtain a Government post within one year after they have quit Congressional service.

Proposed increase in salary of Civil Service Commissioners to $10,000 from $8,500 a year was approved, as was a raise for the executive director and chief examiner to $9,500 from $7,500.

An amendment by Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, to postpone the effective date of the act to April 15, 1941, was eliminated. The measure would become effective as soon as it is signed by the President.

The conferees confirmed their previous tentative decision to restore the 10,000 deputy marshals and deputy collectors of internal revenue to the bill.

They removed an amendment forbidding discrimination against present employes because of place of residence. This proposal had been offered by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland; but Representative Ramspeck said it was unnecessary since elimination of the Keller-Nichols amendment.

Transportation Urged by Tunney, So Guardists Can Vote

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—Gene Tunney urged today that the Government assume the responsibility of making arrangements for National Guardsmen now in camp to vote there, or order the Army to provide transportation home for those wishing to vote.

TUNNEY

His plea was in a telegram to President Roosevelt. "The men who defend their Government," he said, "should not be stripped of the right to help elect that Government."

Tunney is chairman of the National Foundation for American Youth, which, he said, is pressing a nonpartisan drive to get young voters out to the polls in November.

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—Oscar R. Ewing, assistant to Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn, said in a statement today that the Roosevelt Administration had found jobs for 13,000,000 persons.

Ewing said there were supposed to be 16,000,000 persons out of work in 1933 and cited estimates "that 500,000 people come to working age every year, which would make the aggregate 20,000,000."

Wendell Willkie, he said, was using 9,600,000 as a present figure for the unemployed, but the nearest official estimate was something over 7,000,000.

"An ordinary arithmetical deductional would be that under the Roosevelt Administration, 13,000,000 have found jobs, or, if we take Mr. Willkie's figure, about 11,500,000 have been put to work. That sounds like a pretty good handling of the unemployment situation."

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, expressed the conviction today that there was "no significance" in the fact that James A. Farley omitted any mention of President Rosevelt when he addressed the Democratic State convention recently.

The former postmaster general, speaking as Democratic State chairman, praised the Administration of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman but did not mention the national ticket.

Today Wagner said:

"No significance at all; I am absolutely sure of it. I know Jim Farley well, and he is a great friend of the President."

Kansas City, Oct. 2 (AP).—Edward J. Flynn, New York, Democratic national committee chairman, departed by airplane today for Fargo, N. Dak., to confer with party leaders. He planned to be in Butte, Mont., tonight.

Ga. Democrats Vote Rivers Off Committee

Mrs. Price Is Also Ousted; Successors To Both Are Named

By the Associated Press

Macon, Ga., Oct. 2.—Georgia's Democratic convention, carrying out the dictates of Governor-Nominate Eugene Talmadge, erstwhile critic of the New Deal, declared vacant today the National Committee post held by Gov. E. D. Rivers, ardent supporter of the Roosevelt Administration.

Introducing the resolution to reject Rivers, Delegate John C. Evans declared the Governor was a "self-appointed" committeeman on the national body who did not "truly represent Georgia democracy."

The uproarious convention, which also declared vacant the committeewoman's post held by Mrs. Virginia Polhill Price, shouted approval to the election of Talmadge's son and campaign manager, Herman Talmadge, as the successor to Rivers on the national committee. Mrs. Fred Hayes, of Toccoa, was designated to succeed Mrs. Price.

Delegates wrote into the platform a demand for curtailment of Federal spending, except that for defense, and a criticism of the "heavy load of taxes" imposed by the Federal Government. The platform did not specify what Federal appropriations should be cut but asked for curtailment of "nondefense extraordinary expenditures . . . however well merited they may have heretofore been."

Gov.-Nominate Talmadge repeatedly clashed with New Deal policies during his term as Governor in 1935-36 but in his successful primary campaign he pledged cooperation with the National Administration.

Biddle Tried to 'Destroy' Paper, Bridges Says

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, yesterday charged Solicitor General Biddle with attempts to "destroy" a Chattanooga newspaper competing with a paper in which Biddle was financially interested.

The New Hampshire Republican took the Senate floor to reply to what he called a campaign to "smear" Wendell Willkie, G. O. P. Presidential nominee, as an enemy of freedom of the press.

Bridges said Willkie had been charged with "wrecking" the Chattanooga Daily News because of its opposition to his power interests in a municipal ownership fight in the Tennessee city five years ago.

The charge is "an absurd falsehood," Bridges said, and "the reverse of the coin brings out one of the best illustrations of the New Deal's abuse of official power to oppress and persecute the free press of the Nation at a time when the American press is one of the few remaining free."

"In fact, this publicity may rebound not only to Willkie's credit but also may turn up a pretty smelly mess of New Deal rottenness," Bridges continued. "It might even happen that some of the mud aimed at Willkie may miss him entirely and land smack in the face of the President's own tame millionaire, Francis Biddle."

Bridges asserted that Biddle had used his office to harass the Chattanooga Free Press with flimsy charges which he did not dare submit to a Federal grand jury." Biddle at the time held a financial interest in the Chattanooga Tribune, successor to the defunct News and a rival of the Free Press, Bridges stated.

Had the "conspiracy" against the Free Press succeeded, Bridges shouted, Biddle "would have lined his pockets with the resulting dividends . . . and at the same time Biddle takes rank with Harold Ickes as a New Deal praying Mantis worshiping at the altar of the freedom of the press."

Bridges said the "hypocrisy" of the New Deal had been exposed in a statement issued last week by the Democratic chairman at Chattanooga, "calling on all loyal New Dealers not only to cancel their subscriptions, but also to boycott the advertising of the Chattanooga Times because it had announced its support of Wendell Willkie.

How Big Is Your Dime?

There are no ration cards in America.

And no one to tell you what to buy or when to buy it.

You can still take your own sweet choice!

But that choice works both ways. You can buy a good product for a dime . . . or a poor one.

It's up to you. If you are smart, if you know what you want, you can get it . . . just by asking for it.

Take BEER for instance. There are dozens of different beers in Washington.

They all cost you a dime.

And every dealer in Washington pays exactly the same price for Gunther's beer. Large or small we don't favor one dealer with a better price than another.

Because we can't. We sell Gunther's to everybody at the lowest price for which such a high quality premium dry lager can be sold.

Now any good dealer wants his customers to get the beer they want. But your dealer is busy. He has thousands of items to sell. And he's NOT A MIND READER. He depends on you to tell him what you want.

This is the American Way of doing business. You have your free choice.

If you ask for Gunther's your dime still will buy you a premium dry lager—as fine a beer as you can buy at any price anywhere!

Yes, your dime is just as big as you make it.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Indifferent to Husband's Excessive Love, Wife Holds Him to Blame for Her Attitude; How Ease Conflict?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem concerns my husband, whose chief thought in life seems to be sensual gratification . . . We have been married 15 years and have two children. We are in our late thirties. For a number of years after marriage, I was affectionate toward him; but gradually I showed less affection. Not because I felt less, but because—as I bluntly told him once—of his attitude toward sex. Affection alone was never enough for him.

This has gone on for years and instead of getting better, grows worse. His excessive attitude has caused me to deny him over long periods of time, and this has resulted in much dissension between us. Now he claims it isn't natural for a woman to behave as I do, unless she is in love with someone else. He is such an egotist that he cannot and will not put the blame where I feel it belongs. Something has to be done, as I cannot and will not try to be a wife on his terms.

How can one talk things over with a husband who feels that wifely restraint can only be caused by love of another man? I wish you would express your views on the matter, so that we can bring some harmony into our joint life. We are getting nowhere at present. The constant friction is making me sleepless and nervous and is taxing my husband's health, also. In publishing your reply, please omit the following paragraph, which is for your information alone. . . .
Sincerely, M. H.

Wife Is at Fault, As Much as Husband

DEAR H. W.: In my opinion, the conjugal dissonance must be attributed to psychic incompatibility, pure and simple—which means that it is no more of your husband's making than it is yours. You just aren't on the same wave length, emotionally. You just don't speak the same language of love. But the fact that you live on one level of feeling and he on another certainly doesn't justify your attitude that he is some sort of monster, or that your tempo of emotional expression is the one and only "right and normal" tempo.

Your letter (which, as you see, I have been obliged to re-write and condense throughout), suggests all unawarely that you have been as complacently unsympathetic in the maladjusted relationship as your husband has been uncomprehendingly "excessive." Each, in his way, has been as selfish as the other in insisting his will be done.

But since you have posed the problem for discussion it seems in order to say that you are falling down on the job in placing your husband on the culprit's defensive. What you should do is bring a genuinely open mind to the conflict, conceding the possibility that you have at least as much to learn as he about how to achieve a harmonious, mutually satisfactory love relationship. Your cool self-righteousness is bound to aggravate, rather than ameliorate, his emotional tension.

Furthermore, if you have "denied him over long periods of time," and he has nevertheless remained a faithful husband for 15 years, he has demonstrated a quality of character, a capacity for self control, that suggests you have a piece of human material in your hands worth working with. It is to be regretted that you have severally failed to betake yourselves together, long since, to a physician or psychologist for an objective appraisal of the emotional impasse, and all it implies of obstinate ignorance on both sides.

I am sorry you saw fit to make a secret of your concluding paragraph—which, in fairness to this discussion, should have been openly stated. Obviously, your motive in writing was to get help from me in lecturing your husband for what you conceive to be his gross animality and blameworthy suspicion of your spiritual fidelity. But that kind of backtalk, even if it could be authoritatively documented, gets you nowhere.

However, I suppose we may reassure your husband that your stony indifference to his address doesn't necessarily mean that you are in love with another man. Although your dislocated relations with him could easily lead you to develop a sentimental "fixation" on another man. Emotionally frigid women usually do compensate for the lack of reciprocity in their love life by indulging in romantic reveries or discreet flirtations.

Both of you need re-education in healthy mental attitudes and socially cooperative attitudes toward sex-in-marriage. My advice to you is to get this instruction immediately from the sources aforementioned. It will be of immeasurable benefit to you, whether you continue to live together or whether you decide to part. In remaining together in wrangling hostility, while the best of your life is fast slipping away, you are paying a hideous price for failing to acquaint yourselves with what can and should be done.
M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

KIVIETTE, one of the new "American Couturieres"

Designer and 'Cache' Dress

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

A whole new era of fashion is breaking on the American style front, according to Kiviette, one of America's most original designers. Joining a cavalcade of New York fashion celebrities in Washington yesterday, the famous coutourier had positive beliefs about America's finally realizing it can get both inspiration and products from native, not French, sources.

"Kivy," as the one-time costumer of the Ziegfeld Follies is called, declares it was more snobbery than selectivity that prompted wealthy Americans to prefer French originals to fine domestic designs. Even an inconspicuous American dressmaker with a shingle out in Paris used to be called a "coutourier" by class-conscious fashionists, but now that Americans are being educated to their own designers' inspirations, they won't be so quick to adopt foreign wares, when and if the time comes, "Kivy" believes.

The fine wool suit above borrows it's name from the bandits' hiding place dotting the Southwest. It is called "cache" because of the secret pockets forming the muff

Daily Walk Is a Good Fall Tonic

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU want a good fall tnoic, take a walk. October's bright weather makes you feel like stepping and a walk is mild but exhilarating exercise. All of us—except the postman—should do more of it!

We sit indoors too much. We don't get enough fresh air. We work with the small muscles, those of the eyes, hands and forearms, for hours at a time and their continuous use results in increased tension and nervous fatigue. A good workout involving the large muscles is the antidote and walking does it.

Ideally, the place to walk is in the country. We are cooped up so much of the time that we seem to need the feeling of space. But if you can't take the country air, your best bet is to get into the habit of walking to work—or, at least, part way. Besides, it's a good idea to have some place to go. It makes you step along more briskly.

Walk a Mile and Half

Starting today, walk a mile and a half. Keep that up for a week, then increase your jaunt until you are doing 3 miles a day—every day. You will be able to average about 3 miles in an hour, which is the length of time it takes to get the blood to circulating freely. A straight-away walk of this kind is better for you than several short trips about the neighborhood.

The main thing to remember about your walking posture is to hold your head up. If you hold your head erect, your chest is up, the tummy muscles are pulled up and in where they belong, and the spine is held straight. In holding your head up, make sure that you do not hunch the shoulders, for this causes tension. And swing your arms freely as you stride along.

But you won't lose any weight if you head for the ice box at the end of your constitutional. Walking can't be classed as reducing. But then exercise seldom is! It is slimming, however, for it has a general tonic effect on the musculature and well-toned muscles give your figure better lines. Also, because of the increased sense of well-being, you feel like standing up and that makes you look slimmer.

"I guess I'm a little late—so many things came up at the office, but we'll have everything under control here in short order . . . if everybody just keeps calm.

"Say! Where on EARTH'S my uniform? . . . Why, it MUST have come from the cleaners. They promised—say, let me get those birds on the phone—What? . . . In my closet? . . . Oh, I guess Buddy hung it there.

"Fit? . . . Oh, I guess so, I haven't gained any—to speak of . . . No, I didn't try it on . . . Oh well, I'll slip on the coat, but I know it's no use—say! What's the matter her? Why, the thing's shrunk!

"Now of all the—what? . . . No, it's not either my stomach! I tell you it's shrunk! It's those lousy cleaners . . . Of course I have to have it! For all the parades . . . Well, can't you do something? . . . Move over the buttons? . . . All right, but you'll have to do it quick . . . Look at that clock!

"Say, where's my helmet? . . . In that box? . . . You didn't mash the plume, did you? . . . Well, where'd you put all the medals? . . . With what cards? . . . Postal cards? . . . Addressed to you? . . . What do you want me to write on 'em? . . . Oh, pshaw, I'll be all right . . . Oh, well then, I'll remember.

"Say, where's my good suit? . . . Yes, I took it to the cleaners yesterday—wait till I get those birds on the phone! What's the number? . . . What? . . . Yes, it was a rush order—say, wait! I told 'em I'd call for it. I remember now! Well for heavens' sakes call 'em quick and tell 'em to get a messenger.

"What'd you do with my dinner jacket? . . . No, I've looked everywhere . . . Buddy's closet? What was he doing with it? . . . Yes, here it is! And my good shoes! And my best shirt! And it'll have to be laundered. Of all the nerve!—What? Mail it? . . . All right.

"How're you coming with those buttons? . . . You know the train leaves at 6 . . . Yes, I'll eat dinner on the train. I promised Sam—I mean some of the boys. But say, you might give me a cup of coffee just before I go.

"Eat what? . . . No, I'll be careful . . . No, I won't eat any hot dogs . . . Sam Toper? . . . No, I tell you I'm not going to run around with him—or anybody else. I'll be too busy.

"Say, I can't find half my socks! . . . Buddy's bureau? What't he doing with 'em? . . . Say, if you've finished with those buttons you'd better pitch in and help me pack . . . Bring Sister what? . . . Yes, I'll try to remember. Where's my handkerchiefs? . . . Buddy's bureau? . . . What about Aunt Nettie? . . . Oh, you'd better get her some little thing here and I'll give it to her.

"My money! . . . No, I won't carry too much change . . . Of course I'll be careful . . . No, only a few smokers . . . Well, how would I know what kind of entertainers they'll have? . . . Hootch dancers! . . . Oh, don't be silly!

"Now I believe I've got everything lined up . . . Say, you better call the cleaners again about my suit . . . Where's my topcoat? . . . Buddy's closet? . . . Good Heavens! . . . What? . . . Yes, of course I'll be careful . . . No, I won't forget about Sister . . . Or the postal cards . . . Yes, of course I'll get some sleep . . . No, I won't run around—say, is that a cab whistle? . . . Well, I was looking for one . . . Yes—well, Sam Toper and Bill Razzle said they'd pick me up on their way to the station."

Tip to Pie Bakers

If you have trouble in keeping the crust of a custard pie from becoming soggy, try this suggestion: Heat the milk to boiling and pour it into the rest of the ingredients. Place the filled pie in a moderately hot oven and bake 5 minutes. Reduce the heat to about 325 degrees and continue baking.

Spooky Stunts For Halloween Are Suggested

Spooky shadows, an old witch mumbling spells about your future into her magic cauldron—that's the keynote of your Halloween party! And a bang-up party it will be if you keep the fun at fever pitch with clever fortunes, stunts and games.

The old witch is really just a pal of yours disguised in a false face and creepy black garments, and, of course, the kettle is an ordinary kitchen pot with red crepe paper and flashlights imitating a fire. Dipping her ladle into the magic pot, she hands each guest a twist of paper with a clever fortune written on it.

And! My, the shrieks that greet your Halloween version of "Mystery Box." In an ordinary box place such objects as a rubber glove filled with shaved ice, a piece of steel wool, an old shoe tree!

Now turn out the lights and tell your guests you're going to pass around the ghost's hand, the witch's wig, the skeleton's shin bone—and so on. Then, when everyone has had a chance to feel your scary collection, turn the lights on and have your guests try to write a list of what the box really contained. A prize for the best answer.

U. S. Visitor to South America Takes Mountainous Ride in Paris Gown

THE CAUSE of Pan-American child welfare nearly wrecked the wardrobe of Elizabeth Shirley Enochs during her recent tour of South America as representative of the Children's Bureau. "During her recent tour of South America as representative of the Children's Bureau. "During my visit to Colombia," she says, "I was taken into the country to inspect some foster homes for delinquent children. I was wearing my best dress, a black number which the store said was imported from France and which was to be the keystone of my winter wardrobe. After a motor trip over the peak of the Andes, we met the man who was to escort us to the homes. His first words sent a chill down my spine. The horses are ready,' he said casually.

Mrs. Enochs

"It developed that we had a three-hour horseback ride before us. I explained that I was scarcely dressed for the trip, so we went to a farmhouse and borrowed some clothes. As we set off into the hills, I was wearing a pair of blue pajama trousers under my dress, some chaps over the pajamas, my skirt pulled up around my waist, a pink silk handkerchief at my neck and a broad straw hat. It was a picture Colombia will never forget. Outside of snagging the sleeve on a passing cactus plant, I brought the dress back undamaged."

There's one office downtown where little work is done when the boss is not around. It overlooks a row of dressing rooms adjacent to the women's wear section of a department store, and for some reason the shades are seldom drawn. Reports are that the employes conduct a daily lottery based on the number of pink slips compared with the number of white slips which will make their appearance before nightfall.

ETIQUETTE DEPT.—The wife of one Representative carries calling cards with the words, "Wife of Congressman Blank," engraved in the corner . . . Most Washington socialites accept any dinner-party invitation that comes their way. But there's one outspoken matron, with strong likes and dislikes, who always manages to find out first who the guest of honor is going to be. Then she accepts or declines the invitation according to her feelings toward him.

Mrs. John Alfred White 2d, of Colonial Village, a pianist and composer, recently received this telegraph from a Pennsylvania friend: "Would like you to come tomorrow to play at Republican rally for Willkie." Mrs. White (who is known professionally as Margaret Scott Perin), immediately prepared the reply: "Regret unable to play at Willkie rally. My song 'Roosevelt, We're All For You' was published yesterday. Please tell all my Democratic friends."

WOMAN DRIVER—Unfortunately for Washington's traffic situation, there's a woman in town who's so addicted to cribbage that as she drives she watches for license numbers which would make good hands. Going down Sixteenth street the other day, she spotted a beauty—87-655. "Shall I discard one 5?" she pondered to herself. "Or throw out the 8 and have a double run of 5-6-7?" Just then a crash and a jolt distracted her attention, and she noticed that she had run into a tree.

Society Notables From Capital, Baltimore And Virginia Attend Laurel Track Opening

Adverse Weather Fails to Dampen Gayety Of Sports Attraction at Maryland Resort; Maj. and Mrs. G. L. Stryker Give Luncheon

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"DO THE HORSES RUN even when it rains?" asked a naive spectator eyeing the ominous clouds yesterday at the Laurel track.

The answer is—to put it mildly—they do. And they did in a big way, as the launching of the season's meeting brought society in droves from Washington, Baltimore, the Virginia hunt country and points north and south. Beginning with the buffet luncheon at which Maj. G. L. Stryker, president of the Laurel track, and Mrs. Stryker were hosts, and staying on until the final race was chalked off the cards, a sizable number of notables pocketed winnings or lamented losses, and called it a great day at the races in either case.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER.

Gathering gayly in the clubhouse promptly at 12:30 o'clock, guests invited to the luncheon consulted racing sheets, discussed thoroughbreds and jockeys and tossed off tips in every direction. Sartorially speaking, any type of attire seemed suitable. Women in silver fox mingled with women in tweedy outfits. Well-known sportsmen in many instances looked the role in gayly striped coats while others appeared in business suits and snap-brimmed hats.

"Washingtonians at the Laurel races change from year to year, but you always see the same people from Baltimore," said a spectator who knows the cream of the crop from both cities and was doing a good day's work in making the rounds at the luncheon.

A center of attention was W. L. Brann, owner of the great racer, Challedon, who attended the luncheon and later took a number of friends to watch the races from his box. While cameras were turned in his direction, other notables also were being lined up for news shots.

AN ATTRACTIVE threesome soon clicked off on film were Mrs. Brann and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Himes, of Prospect Hall, Md. Across the room, Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley chatted with Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Howes, while in a group nearby were Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse and Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, who admitted that while she lives in the heart of the Virginia hunting country she knows "less about horses than almost anything you can mention."

Treasurer of the United States William A. Julian threaded his way through the crowd and seemed to know just about everybody present. Mrs. Van-Lear Black, of Baltimore, chatted, with Mrs. J. Fred Essary and her daughter, Peggy; and James Butler, of New York, and Mrs. Stryker agreed to pose for pictures "just once more because it's about time for the races to begin."

Mrs. George Harrison, looking like a picture of what a well-dressed woman wears to the races, appeared in a smart black suit set off with a trim turban accented in red. With her was her son, Gordon Grayson. Mrs. Ral Parr was a fetching figure in an all-black ensemble. Wallace Lanahan greeted friends on all sides and stopped to talk with Mr. and Mrs. James Lemon.

"The first race has started!" someone cried, and presently all the luncheon guests were descending the stairway and making a beeline for the boxes outside. From then on, horses ran away with the spotlight, and you remembered Important Persons were present only when you saw them on their way to place bets or collect their winnings.

FACES AT THE RACES: The Governor of Maryland and Mrs. Herbert O'Conor were in their box the entire afternoon and held an informal reception for friends most of the time . . . Mr. and Mrs. Gray Foster were a tweedy twosome with hatless and handsome Mrs. Waggaman Pulver and Alfons Landa . . . Scarcely taking his eyes off the horses all afternoon was Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early, who was in a box with Mrs. Early, Mrs. George Allen and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Butcher . . . Mrs. Edward Reed was glimpsed in the crowd, as were such well-known Marylanders as Mr. and Mrs. D. Stewart Ridgeley, Henry A. Parr 3d, Mrs. George Brown, jr., and Howard Bruce, who rarely misses a race meeting and is quite an authority on which horse in the line-up looks like "a good mudder."

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

SINCE PATRICIA PROCHNIK was quoted in a national magazine as preferring foreigners, she has been swamped with indignant letters extolling American manhood. Her latest batch includes one from a cowboy. Miss Prochnik claims that she was misquoted, and that she has always liked Americans.

Dudley Harmon

Though now a warbler with Meyer Davis' orchestra, Miss Prochnik makes her headquarters with her family here, leaving town only when she gets a telegram from her new boss. She will appear the middle of the month on one of the "We, the People" radio programs.

THOUGH "CHIP" ROBERT is no longer with the Democratic National Committee, the Roberts and the Roosevelts still have family celebrations in common. Mr. and Mrs. Robert were married on Mrs. Roosevelt's birthday—October 11—and their baby was born on the President's.

LITTLE ENGLISH REFUGEES in this country are getting used to gingerale and cookies in the afternoon instead of the inevitable cup of tea. At least that's what Mrs. Bishop Hill feeds her two little boys, sons of a friend. The British children are evidently as stoical about exile as their parents in England are about bombs, and so far no adopters report a severe case of homesickness.

MRS. WILLARD REED, in town the other day from Long Island, says she no longer hears except indirectly from her sister, Foreign Correspondent Virginia Cowles. "Didda" Cowles has been in London ever since the war started. The last news Mrs. Reed had was that she was being paged in a London hotel by a bellhop shouting, "Miss Cowles, your house is burning up."

Mrs. Reed stopped here for a few hours en route to visit Mrs. Jerauld Wright, of Annapolis. They formerly shared a Georgetown apartment with Betty Hardie, now Donna Betty Capomazza.

SOME OF THE best looking young women in town will be selling gadgets at the British War Relief luncheon next Thursday, so the men might just as well say good-by right now to their sales resistance. Among those lined up are Mrs. Jasper DuBose, Mrs. George Howe, Mrs. Anthony Rumbold and Mrs. William Breese.

Mrs. Anthony Rumbold and Mrs. Walter Chappell are corralling additional talent.

Modeling the new clothes will be the Misses Sita Finkenstaedt, Marion Kirk, Mary Selden Kennedy, Nancy Strong and Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin.

THE FIRST PLACE returning diplomats go when they reach Washington is room 115 of the State Department. There Miss Dix herds them to a big leather bound volume, where they register address while in this country. The department has been keeping these books since 1897 and they include some very famous signatures. This year Miss Dix is having women register as well—"blitzkreig widows"—so their colleagues who come here can locate them.

NEW FACES: Ralph Paine, formerly chief of the European staff of a national magazine, and just back from shepherding his assistants out of Paris. He now heads the magazine's Washington bureau. Mr. Paine is the son of the late Ralph D. Paine, famous for having written some 40 boys' adventure books. Like his son, the late Mr. Paine also covered wars—the Boxer Rebellion and the Spanish American.

MRS. TRUXTON BEALE is planning a luncheon on Sunday before the gala polo match for British relief.

American Women's Voluntary Services Plan Diet and Canteen Course Here

THE LOCAL BRANCH of American Women's Voluntary Services has announced a diet and canteen course to be started in November under Mrs. Lennice Sartell. The lectures, covering 27 hours, will constitute the standard Red Cross course on nutrition and those who successfully complete it will be certified by the Red Cross to do emergency canteen work.

Mrs. Sartell, who has volunteered to give the training, is a dietician whose standing qualifies her to conduct a course entitling the students to certification.

Although it is primarily for members of the A. W. V. S., applications will be accepted from non-members as long as there is seating capacity. The cooperation between the Red Cross and the A. W. V. S. is in line with the aim of both organizations to avoid duplication of effort.

In the motor transport division of the A. W. V. S., new classes in repairs are being started as fast as others finish the course. Mrs. James McMillan Gibson, chairman, will soon announce plans for the winter courses which will be held indoors.

Other training work now in progress includes a 20-hour first aid course on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. and from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m. The evening class began September 20 and the morning class, Sept. 23. An advanced first aid class, which opened September 24, is held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. and is a 10-hour course. No new members are being enrolled in these classes which conclude October 14, and will fill every evening of the week until then.

A diction class will start Monday, October 14, at 8 p. m. for beginners and one for advanced students October 17 at 7:30 p. m. Miss May Blaisdell will hold diction classes for members of the A. W. V. S. in her studio, 1206 Connecticut avenue, this winter. All members must be enrollees of the A. W. V. S.

Wellesley Club to Aid Refugees

Plans Discussed To Bring 12 British Children and 4 Mothers for 'Duration'

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Plans for bringing 12 British children and 4 mothers to Washington "for the duration" were discussed last night by members of the Wellesley Alumnae Club at its first fall meeting. Mrs. John P. Summerscale, member of the club and wife of the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and chairman of the refugee committee, was hostess.

The group to be sponsored by the Wellesley women here is from the London School of Economics. In addition to finding homes for both mothers and children, the club is raising money to provide refugee insurance for them, to give a small allowance to the mothers and to help with the purchase of clothes and other necessities.

This activity has been taken on by the club in addition to its usual support of a fund from which several scholarships are given annually to Washington girls studying at Wellesley. The experience of generous giving in the interest of this has resulted in the members seeing the possibility of launching a broader program of helpfulness in the war emergency, according to the club officers.

Mrs. Summerscale read a letter from the secretary of the London School of Economics expressing gratitude for the invitation to the group to come to this country and explaining the distress felt by those who are able to come at leaving others behind.

"Offers Great Britain is now receiving from the Dominions and the United States have been one of the happier events of the war," he said.

"The postponement of the government scheme of emigration has left many people in this country in a difficult moral position. There is considerable criticism expressed in the House of Commons and in the press about the class bias that may enter in the selection of the children and parents who may now cross the Atlantic.

"Those who have received offers and can afford to pay their passages, naturally feel embarrassed at taking advantage of their opportunity when other classes of the population do not possess such opportunities.

"It may seem muddle-headed, but I assure you, in the present state of opinion here, with the unbroken unity of morale, even a faint suspicion of acting sectionally causes one agonies of conscience."

Guests at the meeting were two Englishwomen who have recently come over and are residing with Mr. and Mrs. Summerscale. One was his mother, Mrs. Percy Summerscale, and the other Mrs. Alexander Franks, widow of an R. A. F. flier who was killed at Dunkerque. She is here with her little son, Gordon, 18 months.

Mrs. Holcombe Is Feted Here

Mrs. V. Eugene Holcombe, of Charleston, W. Va., national president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Medical Society, was honor guest yesterday at the first fall meeting of the local branch of the organization.

The meeting, at which Mrs. Daniel L. Borden, the Washington president, presided, was held in the newly-decorated library of the Medical Building. The redecoration just completed, was planned by a joint committee from the Medical Society and the auxiliary. The room is in tones of brown with deep green floor coverings and tan antique leather chairs.

Mrs. Holcombe discussed the activities of the national auxiliary and urged members here to read "The Bulletin," its official organ, pointing out that a unity of purpose throughout the branches would give strength to the national auxiliary. She asked the women to meet the challenge of the world situation in readiness to serve in any way they were needed.

Mrs. Holcombe was the guest last night of Mrs. Prentiss Willson. She is returning from a six weeks tour of 17 States in the interests of the auxiliary.

U. S. and Virginia Squabble Over Gravelly Point Receipts

A struggle between the Federal Government and the State of Virginia over the right to police and to regulate tax revenues from operation of Washington's National Airport at Gravelly Point flared into the open yesterday in a renewal of the 34-year-old District-Virginia boundary dispute.

Federal agencies, including the Civil Aeronautics Board and the Department of Justice, are concerned lest Virginia gain police and tax jurisdiction of the huge air terminal, dedicated Saturday by President Roosevelt.

Their concern was revealed in hearings on an amendment to a bill which, if passed by Congress and approved by the Virginia Legislature, would fix the disputed boundary at the mean high-water mark on the Virginia side of the Potomac River. The amendment would alter the proposed boundary to bring the entire area of the new airport into the District.

Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman of the subcommittee conducting the hearings, announced at their conclusion that both the bill and amendment would be referred without recommendation to a meeting of the full District of Columbia Committee, probably next week.

Hunter said the committee's action did not necessarily mean that the bill would be shelved. "In view of the circumstances," he declared, "the subcommittee could do no more than let the full committee decide the bill's fate."

Virginia officials at the hearing indicated strongly that the bill will be rejected by the Legislature if it passes Congress with the amendment sponsored by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Virginia's stake in the controversy is the large gasoline tax revenue the State stands to lose when airline operations are transferred from Washington-Hoover Airport, which is within State jurisdiction, to Gravelly Point where gasoline pumps and storage facilities are being installed to bring them within the present boundary of the District.

At present one-third of the field is in the District, two-thirds in Virginia. As the boundary bill, without amendments, would place the entire field in the State, Federal officials fear Virginia might seek additional revenue in the form of fees charged airlines for operation licenses.

The Civil Aeronautics Board's contracts with airlines for hangar and other rentals were made without consideration of State taxes and one board spokesman estimated that the charges agreed upon might have to be reduced as much as $50,000 to $100,000 a year if Virginia gains control of the airport. The District refunds taxes on gasoline used in aviation.

From hangar rentals and revenues from restaurant and other concessions, the Civil Aeronautics Board expects to amortize its $14,000,000 investment at Gravelly Point.

Battling for Virginia at the hearings were John Munce, jr., auditor of the division of motor vehicles; D. Gardner Tyler, jr., assistant attorney general; Lawrence Douglas, Arlington County commonwealth's attorney; Carl Budwesky, Alexandria city manager, and Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), of Virginia.

Munce pointed out that the State collects 3 cents a gallon for aviation gasoline now sold at Washington Airport on a basis of mileage traveled over the State by airlines.

One Killed, 3 Hurt as Crash Halts Holiday Trip

Tragedy turned to sorrow the Jewish New Year's holiday of a Washington family yesterday, bringing death to a father and sending his daughter to a hospital with serious injuries following an auto collision on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard 3 miles south of Laurel, Md.

Also hurt in the accident were a Baltimore man and his wife who were driving to Washington to help their son celebrate his twenty-sixth birthday.

The dead man Louis Linden, 58, route supervisor of the Suburban Club Gingerale Co. of Washington. His address is 4119 Davis place northwest.

Injured in the accident were Mr. Linden's daughter, Hortense Linden, 21, who also lived at the Davis place address, and Sandford D. Eigenbrode, 61, and his wife, Mrs. Anne Eigenbrode, 58, both of Baltimore, Md.

The injured were taken to Casualty Hospital by the Branchville and the Bladensburg rescue squads. Miss Linden suffered head injuries and a fractured arm. Mrs. Eigenbrode received injuries to a knee, ribs and ankle and cuts on the face and hands. Her husband suffered a jaw fracture and injuries to a knee.

The Linden auto, bound for Baltimore, and the Eigenbrode car, headed toward Washington, collided head-on about 4:30 p. m. A few minutes later Hyman Schwartzman, 5144 Nebraska avenue northwest, Linden's brother-in-law, passed the scene while driving from Baltimore, noted the smashed cars and a covered body lying at the edge of the road. Two hours later he was telephoned by a Washington Post reporter and learned that the body was that of his relative.

Schwartzman said he understood Mr. Linden's son, Daniel, also an employe of the gingerale company, had accompanied his father and sister when the couple left for Baltimore, their former home, where they were to have spent the Jewish holidays with relatives.

President Gets Police, Firemen Retirement Bill

A bill to permit District police and firemen to retire on half pay when they reach 55 years of age and have served 25 years was sent to the White House last night for President Roosevelt's signature.

It's passage in the House yesterday brought a brief skirmish between Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, and members of the House District Committee.

Rich denounced the retirement age, declaring:

"If you keep cutting down the retirement age, after awhile they won't want to work at all. I wouldn't want to retire at 55, it's too young."

According to Metropolitan police officials, members of the department evidently agree that at 55 a man is too young to stop work. Inspector L. I. H. Edwards declared that only a small number of policemen expect to take advantage of the measure's provisions of the approximately 100 men who would be eligible.

Representative Eberharter Democrat), of Pennsylvania, a member of the District committee, replied to Rich by stating that most large cities have more liberal retirement laws than the District and that the bill will bolster morale in the police and fire departments.

In passing the measure, the House accepted Senate amendments setting the 55-year age limit, fixing the retirement fund at a maximum of $30,000 a year to preclude the possibility of wholesale retirements and to include within the bill's scope the Secret Service, White House detail, as well as White House and Park police.

So we hitched our wagon to a FIREBALL

—and gave these smarter, roomier cars even more sensational PERFORMANCE than before.

THIS formidable example of precision machinery you see above is the new 1941 Buick FIREBALL engine.

It takes its name from what happens inside it.

Like all engines that hold major speed records on land, sea and in the air—like the famed General Motors new Allison aviation engine—it is valve-in-head type.

The pistons in this Buick FIREBALL Eight are found in no other automobile engine.

Cupped in new contours to complement the dome of the cylinders, they roll the inrushing fuel charge into a flattened and turbulent ball, packed fat with potential power.

Concentrated about the racing-car type spark plugs, that explosive ball is fired from its very heart.

So great is its extra thrust that the same-size engine which last year developed 107 horsepower now pours out a super-efficient 115.

And so successfully does this engine make the most of modern fuels that you can use regular-priced fuels and still get more miles per gallon throughout the whole performance range.

This is the Buick FIREBALL principle, latest development of Buick's exclusive Dynaflash design.

But there's still more to the story in the wonders worked by Compound Carburetion.

A standard part of Buick SUPER, CENTURY, ROADMASTER and LIMITED engines, this fuel-supply system lets you travel at fifty on the same meager fuel ration you ordinarily expend to get thirty, and delivers up to 10% or 15% more miles per gallon of gasoline.

You can have it in your Buick SPECIAL for a small extra charge—and step up your 115-horsepower engine to a walloping 125.

THE FIREBALL* DOES IT!

Modern gasolines have high octane ratings to permit higher compressions without "ping." Note how this piston, which can be used only in valve-in-head engines, rolls the fuel charge into the shape of a flat-toned ball that centers around the new, smaller, racing-car type spark plug. Fired at its very heart, this more highly compressed fuel lets go with such full-forced, "ping-free" wallop that any gasoline of 75 octane rating (now available at standard-fuel prices) may be used in the 115-hp. engine. Any fuel of 80 octane rating serves in the 125- and 165-hp. engines.

According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, a super meteor which travels with a series of explosions like the shock waves of a great projectile is called a "FIREBALL."*

Apartment Proposal Stirs Georgetown

Social and Citizen Leaders Fight Zone Change Asked by Kirk

The Georgetown section of the Social Register, as well as citizens' groups, yesterday stormed the District Zoning Commission to demand it deny a plea by Alexander Kirk, charge d'affaires at the American Embassy in Berlin, through which he seeks to build a $2,000,000 apartment house on his estate in Georgetown.

Kirk, through his attorney, Vernon Lowrey, asked the commission to change the zoning of his estate, Wisconsin avenue, R street, Reservoir road and Thirty-fourth street, to permit building of the apartment house.

Some 50 persons, including Mrs. Gerard Reilly, wife of the Solicitor of the Labor Department; Mrs. James Rowe, wife of one of President Roosevelt's administrative assistants, and Thomas Murray Wilson, American consul general at Sydney, New South Wales, sent in letters of protest.

Cheers and applause by the socially prominent who gathered to protest the petition, greeted the remarks by Fontaine Bradley, counsel for the protestants, when he said:

"Attractive Georgetown would stick out like a sore thumb if the petition for rezoning is granted."

Foresees Realty Depreciation

Bradley stated the value of the private homes abutting the Kirk estate would depreciate should the commission grant the petition.

Harry K. Boss, representing Consul Wilson, who owns property in Georgetown, pointed out this section was the "unique" spot of the country. He compared Georgetown with Williamsburg, Va., where Rockefeller Foundation spent $15,000,000 restoring the old city. He said likewise "millions of dollars" are invested in Georgetown to "preserve the old city."

Several times Col. David McCoach, jr., the chairman of the commission, had to call for order because of the vociferous behavior of some of the audience.

The two citizens' associations—Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown and the Georgetown Citizens Association—joined with the social register group to protest the apartment-house development.

The apartment house would consist of two wings, according to Lowrey, running down Wisconsin avenue and Thirty-fourth street, with the main entrance on R street. Automobiles would be housed under the building.

Many Lodge Protests

The opposing attorney, Bradley, said the structure, if permitted, would bring about depreciation of "all Georgetown property" and not only that part near the development. Lowrey said under the present zoning it is permissable to build a string of small business houses along Wisconsin avenue and "cheap single-family homes" on the rest of the square.

Others who either appeared in protest or sent in letters of protest included: John Ihlder, director of the ADA; Drew Pearson; John Blake Gordon, Frank P. Leetch, Mrs. Alice McHardy Dye, F. Cuniberti, Daniel J. Cleary, jr., William H. Quealey, William D. Lloyd, John T. Campbell, Mary B. Pettis, Mrs. Mary R. Hayes, Roxana B. Doran, Grace O. Lowry, Julia B. Dormady, Dr. John Marsalka, Walter E. Whitt, Charles Teter, Cecil F. Hilleary, Austin E. Thompson, Mrs. Margaret M. Renshaw, Reeve Hoover, Daniel C. Long, Frank R. Cohill, Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., Elizabeth Dean, Genevieve Wimsatt, owner of the only Chinese-type house in the District; Commdr. Homer C. Wick, United States Navy, retired; James B. Davis, George L. Howe, Rear Admiral H. L. Brinser, United States Navy; David E. Finley, director of the Melon Art Gallery; John Walker, curator, National Gallery of Art; Gale McLean, Mrs. Samuel Reber, Edward Burling, jr.; A. O. Stanley, chairman of the International Joint Commission; Fulton Lewis; former Ambassador F. L. Belin, of Poland; Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan, director of the Washington Town Hall; Helen Woods, niece of J. P. Morgan, and Nathan Fox.

Medical Building Change Asked

In another case, Charles Stanley White, president of Doctors Hospital-Columbia Medical Building Corporation, appeared to urge approval of a change in zoning to permit two additional stories to the medical building which is adjacent to the hospital, at Nineteenth and I streets northwest.

Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, secretary of the Doctors Hospital, pointed out that additional space in the medical building is necessary to accommodate nurses in training, internes, establishment of a tumor clinic and for room to house various medical equipment. The buildings are joined by corridors on certain floors.

Dean Noble C. Powell, of the Washington Cathedral, and the Rev. Dr. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Alban's, appeared at yesterday's hearing to protest a change of zoning at the southeast corner of Wisconsin and Massachusetts avenues, to permit remodeling of a filling station.

Property owners of Brentwood Park appeared to protest establishment of a parking lot at a triangle bounded by Evarts street, Saratoga and Montana avenues, northeast, which would be used for patrons of the new Village Theater, soon to be opened by Louis Bernheimer, local exhibitor.

Red Cross Functions Outlined for Rotarians

D.C. Test Plant Opening Asked

Protesting abandonment of the $100,000 District building materials-testing laboratory, the Association of Oldest Inhabitants last night laid plans to urge that Congress rescind the proviso prohibiting appropriation of funds for the plant's operation.

"Letters asking the testing station's reopening will be sent the District commissioners, Congressional committees and the American Automobile Association," said Jesse C. Suter, one of the members. The A. A. A. is collaborating with the Oldest Inhabitants in a move to effect the station's reopening.

The laboratory in question was constructed in 1931. Since 1933 the building has been locked upon Congressional order which prohibited the District commissioners to use it. The Bureau of Standards is now doing the work formerly done by the District plant, at an estimated additional cost of $15,000 a year.

Two new members, Andrew R. Loftstrand and William V. Mahaney, were elected at last night's meeting, and two delegates, John Clagett Proctor and James F. Duhamel, were named to represent the association at the first meeting of the Federation of Citizens Associations next Saturday.

Nazi Seizures Stop Shipments Of Food to Occupied France

The American Red Cross has ceased shipping foodstuffs into occupied France because of a "difficult problem" presented by the presence of German invaders, Miss Mabel Boardman, national Red Cross secretary, revealed yesterday.

Speaking at a roll call luncheon of the Washington Rotary Club at the Willard Hotel, Miss Boardman said reports had been received that the Nazi's had confiscated previous food shipments for their own use.

"We are faced with a difficult problem," she said, "and the Red Cross has stopped sending food into occupied France until it is certain just which side is being benefitted."

It was understood by reports from abroad, Miss Boardman told the meeting, that food shipments consigned for the relief of France's civilian population never reached their intended destination, but were intercepted by and distributed to the German invaders.

"At the moment," she added, "this is our greatest problem and the Red Cross decided to halt this activity until a solution can be reached."

Since September, 1939, Miss Boardman declared, the American Red Cross, working in cooperation with the international organization, has aided ten war-stricken nations. A total of $8,000,000 has been expended in all types of relief—medical supplies, food, clothing, etc.

She detailed Red Cross functions in evacuating American refugees in early stages of the conflict abroad, explained that civilian casualties have broadened the scope of Red Cross work and appealed for Rotary support in the current membership drive.

In our own country, Miss Boardman pointed out, relief funds totaling $680,000 were expended last year, as a result of 154 major disasters. Disaster relief also was sent to five foreign countries at a cost of $66,000.

Edgar Morris, general chairman of the local roll call, predicted a substantial gain in Red Cross memberships this year, but told his listeners it was "up to them."

Volunteer leaders in the Red Cross movement locally were honor guests at the Rotary luncheon.

Red Cross Enrollment Has Biggest Day

Enrollments that far exceeded those of any other day in the 1940 Red Cross Roll Call yesterday drove the total membership in the campaign to 22,520.

In stores, banks, on street corners, and at headquarters, 2020 Massachusetts avenue northwest, 6,222 Washingtonians contributed to the drive. Previous record was set Tuesday when 5,393 persons made donations.

Eight business firms were reported 100 per cent contributors last night.

Seven of these, in the industrial group, were Brown, Goodwn & Olds; William J. Flather, jr.; Folger Nolan & Co.; H. C. Frick Co.; Robinson Rohrbaugh & Lukens; E. H. Rollins & Sons, and Henderson & Wenger, Inc. The Olmstead Grill also showed a 100 per cent personnel contribution.

U. S. Stenographer Among 10 Winning Flight Scholarships

SHE WANTS "WINGS"—Mary C. Buehne, 20, Government stenographer, of 1812 Upshur street northeast, won flying scholarship awarded through civil pilot training project

A Government stenographer with an urge "to haul passengers" was among 10 prospective flyers awarded scholarships for flight training yesterday after completing a ground-school course at Columbus University.

She is Miss Mary Catherine Buehne, of 1812 Upshur street northeast, employed in the General Accounting Office.

With nine young men, she will receive instructions at Beacon Airfield, Alexandria, under the Civil Aeronautics Board's program for increasing the Nation's supply of pilots.

More than 300 students completed the Columbus University ground course, the second held at that institution, and competed in examinations for the 10 scholarships.

Fire Hazards In Schools Decrease

Most of Them Of Minor Nature, Report to Board Indicates

Although "emergency" items were cited at 131 District public school buildings in the annual fire-inspection report, made public yesterday, many of them were minor and inspectors reported general improvement in fire hazards since last year.

The report made by District officials was relayed to the Board of Education at its meeting yesterday by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent, who said that "all building conditions considered urgent are immediately handled by the repair shop."

The inspectors pointed out that many unsatisfactory conditions noted at the first inspection were corrected before the preparation of the final report.

Items listed as "emergency" included subjects such as "provide a standard interior fire alarm system" and "remove the thumb latch from exit door from domestic science room."

In 49 other buildings, no emergency items were pointed out, and in most of them conditions were deemed "satisfactory."

Report Sent to Finance Group

The board referred the report to its finance committee for consideration in connection with budget estimates, and to the committee on buildings, grounds and equipment for study and possible action.

Dr. Ballou pointed out that "the need for better egress facilities at six schools is considered the most urgent of the recommendations."

J. J. Crane, first assistant superintendent in charge of business affairs, said after the meeting that there was "nothing in the report indicating the safety of any child is in jeopardy." He praised the thoroughness of the inspectors in listing the items.

The report was signed by E. L. Jones, inspector, fire prevention division, District Fire Department, and B. R. Holmes, inspector, building maintenance, of the District.

Would Enlarge Proposed School

H. D. Woodson, leader of a delegation of citizens at the board meeting, urged that the proposed 750-pupil colored senior high school near Twenty-fourth street and Benning road northeast be constructed to accommodate a larger number. He said that due to housing developments in that area "probably 1,200 pupils will be knocking at the door of that school 10 years from now."

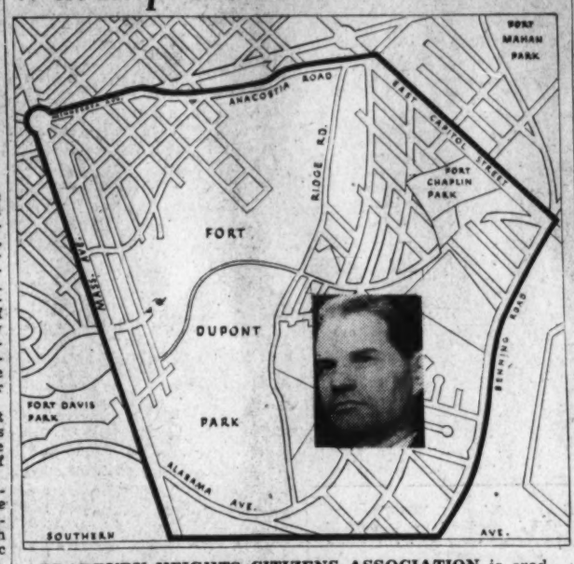
School budget hearings before the Commissioners will begin at 10 a. m. Monday.

Four teachers were [illegible] to night schools under a waiver of a board rule limiting employment in these schools to six consecutive years. School officers have been unable to find properly trained and experienced teachers to take their places, it was stated. They are Miss Vermelle Turner, teacher of dyeing and cleaning, M. M. Washington Vocational School; J. L. Hunter, teacher, automobile mechanics, Armstrong High School; F. A. Gregory, teacher, electricity, Armstrong High School; R. W. Watt, teaching principal, Chamberlain Night School.

For the same reason two teachers, employed in regular day schools and in summer school, were appointed to night school also, under a waiver of the rule that no employe be carried on more than two school payrolls during any fiscal year. They are Samuel Strauss, McKinley Night School, and Mrs. F. G. Newman, Western Night School.

Working for Washington

Bradbury Heights Citizens Win Improvements for Area



BRADBURY HEIGHTS CITIZENS ASSOCIATION is credited with most of the work in building up this section of Washington. Henry Austin (inset) is the group's president

This is the fourth article in a series about citizens associations in the District of Columbia, and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

Much of the credit for building up that comparatively isolated section of Washington just north of Fort Dupont Park and nearly at the eastern tip of the District line is due to the energetic Bradbury Heights Citizens Association.

An extensive program to continue these improvements has been mapped and will be presented tonight at the organization's first meeting of the new season, in the Bradbury Heights Methodist Church at 8 o'clock. Nine major objectives are listed for discussion.

Aims of the unit's fall drive are to obtain a bridge on Fort Drive, in the park, thus saving a 3-mile drive to park recreational areas; construction of the Burns street sewer; extension of Ridge road through to Minnesota avenue; erection of a fire engine house on Benning road; and construction of an eight-room elementary school.

Transportation Problems

There are still transportation problems, although the association has obtained bus service to the section, President Henry Austin said. A minor, but persistent, headache in this connection is the fact that most residents of the Bradbury Heights section must pay two fares to two independent transportation companies to get to downtown Washington, he added.

To find what the community sentiment is on current problems, the association this year has conducted a door-to-door survey and in the past has sent out numerous questionaires. As a result, it keeps well informed of local statistics and needs.

Through the efforts of the organization in the last 10 years, the community has obtained hard-surfaced roads, city gas, sewage and bus service, fire protection, mail and express service and other city advantages, which have enabled it to grow from a few scattered houses to a section of more than 300 new homes, according to President Austin.

Election of Officers Tonight

Most active workers in the association are Austin, president for the last three years; W. D. Willis, who was instrumental in getting the school grant; I. W. Potts, responsible for hearings on bus service; O. E. Robbins, chairman of the recreation committee, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Monar, who have planned many of the neighborhood improvements.

Typical of the recration get-togethers which the association holds periodically was a picnic last month in Fort Dupont Park, where community residents climaxed the day with an evening around the council ring camp fire.

Regular meetings are held on the first Thursday of each month in the Bradbury Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, at 8 p. m. Officers for the coming year will be elected at tonight's meeting. Reports also will be heard from association representatives at the Public Utility Commission hearing Tuesday regarding improved transportation in that area.

Woman, 88, Injured By Automobile

An 88-year-old woman, Miss Mary S. Lord, of 1812 K street northwest, was injured yesterday by an automobile as she crossed the street near her home.

Her condition was reported as "fair" last night at Homeopathic Hospital, where she was treated for a fractured arm, back injuries and abrasions. Polic listed John C Resso, 30, of 838 Jefferson street northwest, as driver of the car.

Woodley Bus Rerouting Order Likely

P. U. C. Expected To Act After Hearing Requests for Stops On Columbia Road

The Public Utilities Commission is expected to order rerouting of the Woodley road buses in order to provide stops along Columbia road, beween Wyoming avenue and Nineteenth street northwest, as a result of a public hearing held yesterday.

The order also will affect the Mount Pleasant street car stops along Columbia road northwest.

Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, appeared at yesterday's hearing to urge new stops on the triangle formed by Columbia road, Wyoming avenue and Nineteenth street. He resides at 1930 Columbia road northwest.

The proposed change would route the bus east on Kalorama road, turning south on Nineteenth street crossing Columbia road and around the little triangle, then a right turn to proceed west on Wyoming avenue and again cross Columbia road.

At present the bus operates via Kalorama road to Columbia road making a sharp turn into Columbia road, down Columbia road to Wyoming avenue and west on Wyoming.

Represeniative Bloom told the commission it would be more convenient for him and other "street-car riders" living between California street and Kalorama road, along Columbia road, if a car stop were ordered on the triangle at Wyoming avenue and Nineteenth.

'Lovely Moment' For D.C. Composer As Song Is Heard

A popular song written by Mrs. Lucile Ferguson, Washington concert pianist and composer of classical music, was introduced to the country last night by Lanny Ross on his Nation-wide Columbia Broadcasting System program.

Mrs. Ferguson

The song, "For One Lovely Moment," marks Mrs. Ferguson's first fling in the popular song writing field, though she is recognized as a classical composer.

Among her previous compositions is a concerto in F major, played on several occasions by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

The Ross program was heard over a C. B. S. Eastern network, including Washington's WJSV, at 7:15 p. m., and over a Western network at 11:15.

Mrs. Ferguson is the wife of Courtland D. Ferguson, radio advertising executive. They live at 105 Bradley lane, Chevy Chase.

Montgomery Tax Series Withheld As Brookings Report Is Imminent

Because the Brookings Institution has disclosed that it expects to publish this month the result of its study of the tax situation in Montgomery County, Md., The Washington Post is withholding its series on the same subject, scheduled to begin today.

The Brookings survey has been under way more than a year, with ten men conducting the study. It has been so exhaustive that the cost to date has exceeded $10,000.

Tigers Confident They'll Win Championship

(See Shirley Povich's World Series Story On Page 1.)

By Charley Dunkley.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Cincinnati, Oct. 2.—The victorious Tigers, from Bobo Newsom down to the newest rookie, held a sneaking suspicion tonight that they have the Indian sign on the Cincinnati Reds and will win the world's championship for sure.

Newsom, individually, was the only Tiger brave enough to make the prediction that they might win four straight.

"Yes, sir," beamed the 6-foot pitcher. "if we hit as we did today, we may win it in four straight. I don't think we'll come back to this ball park after we get through with the Reds in Detroit."

There was a total absence of explosive atmosphere in the Tigers' dressing room. They seemed to be emotionally spent and took their victory merely as another game. The lack of yipping and back-slapping was due possibly to the fact that they went through all that when they finally conquered Cleveland for the American League championship.

Baker Happy

Del Baker, Tiger manager, was smiling and happy.

"Nice going, fellows," he yelled. "That's the big one and we want three more. Tomorrow is another day. Let's battle 'em. It's a hell of a thing to be on a winner, ain't it?"

Baker refused to share the confidence expressed by Newsom.

"No use to be quoted, but we're going to win just as quickly as we can," he said. "If we can win in four, that will be just swell. It may take six, it may take seven, but we're going to win.

"Those old men of mine certainly did hit, didn't they? That's what we've got to do. If we can hit, we can win.

"Poured the Pork"

Rowe, dressing in front of his locker, heard Baker's selection and smiled.

"I hope they give old Schooly seven runs tomorrow," he said.

Bing Miller, the old slugger, now a Tiger coach, said the Reds' outfielders got a lot of paint on their

By Walter Haight

Laurel, Md., Oct. 2.—Rain and mud, getting to be a stock condition for Capital Handicaps, was the order today when Howard Bruce's Jay Jay came through with his second victory in the $7,500 added opening day sprint feature. Answering the urging of Jockey Mannie Berg, the Maryland-owned veteran ran Joseph E. Widener's highly regarded Roman into the mud and then went on to hold W. L. Brann's Pictor safe by a half length. Roman managed to salvage third money for the favorite players, closing two lengths behind Pictor.

Jay Jay whose sire Wise Counsellor, won the Capital in 1925, repeated his triumph of the 1936 renewal when he stepped the 6 furlongs in 1:11 4-5 over a fast track. In joining Sation and Rough Time as double winners of the handicap, Jay Jay was clocked today in 1:13 2-5, creditable time under the conditions. This was the third opening program in a row conducted under weeping skies and over a sloppy track.

The conditions served to riddle the field, although the chief speed merchants marched to the post. The original field of 15 was cut to 10 at scratch time this morning and three others were withdrawn after the program got under way.

Berg rode a good race on Jay Jay. His post position allowed him to race early on the outside and he kept the 7-year-old well placed without getting the mud shower that the pace-making Roman was throwing on his rivals. Entering the stretch, Berg clucked to Jay Jay and the old fellow responded to get to the front of Roman.

Pictor, which had been in rather close quarters on the inside early, was swung out for racing room in the stretch. Roman gave up chasing Jay Jay but Pictor, now in the clear, set sail after the Bruce star. In the final stages, Pictor was wearing down Jay Jay at every jump.

Thanks to a surprise victory by E. C. Smallwood's Brown Saxon, a $34.60 shot in the third race, the successful daily double players took down $243.50 for each $2 investment. Brown Saxon, making the fourth start of his career and a nonwinner, came up on the inside to head Remarkable, the people's choice, out of the main money. Dudie was third.

Scurry Along Wins Chase

The program had opened with Tamil, a 2-year-old from the Mr. R. Heighe barn, closing in front of 11 other maidens in a sprint of 5½ furlongs. Detroit II was second ahead of Lochlea. The winner paid $6.10.

The first steeplechase of the major track season, brought a long shot victory. Walter Wicke's Scurry Along, with the reputation as a quitter, forgot to stop and led all the way to pay $17.20. Rougemont was second and Judges Bid was third. Golden Reel fell and the heavily played Baffler was eliminated when he lost his rider. Both horses and jockeys escaped injury.

Play by Play As Tigers Win Series Opener

FIRST INNING:

TIGERS — Bartell worked the count to two and two and then went down swinging. McCosky lifted a high fly to Ripple in short left. Gehringer looked at three of Derringer's curves, lifted a foul into the left field stands and then grounded out, Derringer to F. McCormick. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

REDS—Werber slapped the first pitch directly at Higgins and was thrown out. After taking a count of two strikes, M. McCormick sent a liner just over York's head that was good for two bases when the ball rolled up against the railing along the right field foul line. Goodman hit a change-of-pace ball to Higgins and was thrown out, McCormick holding second. F. McCormick took one strike and then drove the ball on a direct line to center field and McCosky made a spectacular catch by jumping into the air with his back almost against the wall. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

SECOND INNING:

TIGERS—Greenberg smashed the first pitch into the leftfield corner but was held to one base by Ripple's magnificent throw to Myers. York singled into short right center and Greenberg started for third but was forced to slide back to second base by Goodman's return throw. Campbell laid a sacrifice bunt down the third base line but was safe at first when Werber's throw pulled McCormick off the bag and the bases were filled. Higgins singled into center scoring Greenberg and York, and sending Campbell to second. Sullivan walked again, filling the bases. Whitey Moore went into action in the Red's bull pen. Newsom sent a bounder to F. McCormick who threw to Wilson forcing Campbell and leaving the bases filled. Bartell lined a single past Derringer's head and into center field scoring Higgins and Sullivan and putting Newsom on second. McCosky singled to deep left, scoring Newsom and putting Bartell on second. Moore relieved Derringer as the crowd gave a complimentary cheer. Moore trapped Bartell off second but Myers dropped the ball for an error as Bartell slid back into the bag and was safe. Gehringer popped to Werber. Greenberg worked the count to two and two and then grounded out, Werber to F. McCormick. Five runs, five hits, two errors, two left.

REDS—Ripple waited out a three and two count and then grounded to Gehringer. Wilson lifted a high fly to Greenberg in short left. Joost lined a single to right. Myers grounded to Gehringer who threw to Bartell forcing Joost at second. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Basis Lacking For Rumor Harris Will Quit Nats

By a Staff Correspondent

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 2.—A rumor making the rounds of baseball circles today to the effect that Bucky Harris is "under consideration" for the managerial job at Cleveland, failed to be substantiated by any source.

Cleveland club officials declared they had made no overtures to Harris. Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club, said he had not been advised by Harris of any offer by Cleveland.

"I don't know Harris' intentions," said Griffith. "I merely presume that he wants to stay in Washington. We will discuss the managerial situation after the World Series, as usual. In any event, I will not stand in the way of any player or manager of mine, who has a chance to better himself."

Louisville Beaten Before 7,700 Fans; Washburn Is Winner

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Oct. 2.—Blasting three Louisville pitchers for 15 hits behind the four-hit hurling of lanky George Washburn, Newark won the first game of the Little World Series tonight, 10 to 3, before a crowd of 7,700.

Alex Kampouris put Newark into the lead in the first when he caught one of Presnell's hard ones on the nose and sent it 330 feet over the left-field brick wall for a home run.

Louisville threatened in the first when Chet Morgan cracked a triple into deep right center. Two were out, however, and Louisville's mighty home run clouter, Fred Sington, flied out to Leo Nonnenkamp in deep left.

The Bears added four in the fifth and sent Pressnell to the dugout. He was succeeded by Al Hollingsworth, the big lefthander. Before Pressnell was taken out the Bears nicked him for two more runs on a double by Tom Holmes, Kampouris' single, sacrifice by Ed Levy and a single by Majeski. The Bears added two more off Hollingsworth when Nonnenkamp smashed a home run in deep center field, inside the park, scoring Majeski ahead of him.

Rookie Pitches 7-Hit Ball for First Victory in City Championshp Play; Thornton Lee Chased; Errors Rife

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 2.—The Chicago Cubs, given a seven-hit pitching performance by Rookie Vern Olsen and some wobbly defensive work by their American League opponents, defeated the White Sox, 8 to 2, today to square the city championship series at one victory apiece.

Olsen, a southpaw, limited the White Sox to seven hits as his mates were collecting nine off Thornton Lee, the losing hurler, and Pete Appleton, who began his relief chore in the sixth. The Cubs played steady ball behind their young moundsman, making only one error as against five White Sox blunders.

The National Leaguers picked up single runs in the second and third before sending three across the plate in the fifth on four hits and two errors. They got three more runs in the sixth even though they made only one hit. It was combined, however, with another Sox error, a sacrifice and a base on balls.

Joe Kuhel's single, Julius Solters' triple and an infield out accounted for the two Sox runs in the sixth inning. Olsen allowed two hits in the seventh but set the Southsiders down in order in the final two innings.

Bill Herman, Cub second sacker, pulled a muscle and had to retire in the fifth inning and may be lost to the National League club for to-

Redskin Back to Wear Stomach Brace In Pittsburgh Game

Richard Todd, the scrawny boy from Texas A. & M. whom the Redskins prize so highly, will be back in form Sunday for the Indians' game with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Dick will wear a specially made brace around his midsection that will enable him to run at full steam, it was learned yesterday.

Todd, who started the season out weighing 172 but who has dropped down nearer 165 after two games, received a set of bruised stomach muscles and an internal injury when tackled from the back by Nello Falaschi ten days ago in the game with the New York Giants.

Assured of Todd's appearance in the line-up, the Redskins will leave for Pittsburgh Saturday at 1:10 p. m. and dock at Webster Hall there Saturday night. They will work out here Saturday morning, however.

Art Rooney, owner of the Steelers, called Redskin offices by long distance yesterday and heckled the Redskin bosses at some length with reminders of the upset the Pittsburgh Club pulled over the Redskins when the Washington team was on its way to the national championship in 1937.

Capt. Turk Edwards will be held out of the Steeler game to allow his leg injury to heal fully before the Redskins return October 13 to take on the Chicago Cardinals. The Redskins worked yesterday brushing up on offense.

WASHINGTON, OCT. 3, 1940

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cincinnati, Oct. 2.—A funeral of a sort was being conducted today at Crosley Field in conjunction with the Tigers' victory over the Reds in the first World Series' game. Louie Newsom was laying to rest and permanently interring the oft-voiced doubt of his ability to win under pressure.

POVICH

For years now, Newsom has been pitching under something of a stigma. He could win with a second-division club when little was at stake, but when the chips were down—when he could have helped to put a club into the World Series he had no taste for the job, it was alleged by baseball men.

They pointed to his spotty career in the big leagues. With the last-place St. Louis Browns in 1934, he won 18 games and became something of a pitching figure. But in 1935, with a Washington team that finished fourth and could have been higher, he was a dud. Traded to the Red Sox in 1937 when that team had a chance for the pennant, he similarly flopped.

"He can pitch for those second-division clubs when there is no strain on him," it was pointed out, "but look what happens when he's with a team he can do some good. He's just another one of those guys who don't like the pressure."

That theory was apparently substantiated when, in 1938, the Red Sox, tired of Newsom's failure to win for them in their season of need, traded him to the Browns. With the second-division Browns, Newsom again bounced back as a big winner. He won 20 games for an eighth-place club but paradoxically he was only providing fuel for his detractors.

Newsom won 20 games for the Detroit Tigers last season, but the Tigers were a fifth-place team in 1939, it must be recalled. Again the fellow was having a big year—but with a second division club. He was definitely under a cloud.

Came 1940 and Newsom literally lifted the Tigers into the pennant race with his 21 victories. Seemingly the ghost of his skeptics was laid—but not quite. In that last week of the season, the Tigers were facing the Cleveland Indians in a series that would virtually decide the pennant. The two clubs were tied for the league lead. A victory in any game was precious for either club.

Newsom got the job of pitching the first game of that crucial series. And what happened? He was knocked out of the box. Cleveland, a weak-hitting club, dispatched him early in the series. After Newsom's exit, the Tigers rallied to win the game with a blistering eighth-inning attack. But no credit attached to Bobo. Again it was broadly hinted in baseball circles that Newsom couldn't win with the chips down.

Well, out here this afternoon Bobo sort of confounded his critics. Today he was facing the most important pitching assignment of his life. On him the Tigers were staking their hopes of winning the first World Series game and all that a victory implied—few teams beaten in the first game ever rallied to take a World Series.

They weren't handing Newsom any soft touch today. He was in there against Paul Derringer, one of the great pitchers of baseball. He was facing a club that breezed home to the National League pennant. Anything less than a brilliantly-pitched game seemed fraught with disaster for Bobo. He was definitely on the spot.

Last night, after it was announced he'd pitch the opener, Newsom was seemingly very much aware of his pivotal position in the World Series scheme. In the Tigers' hotel he forewent his usual strut and swagger and stuck closely to his room. On his one foray into the packed lobby, he brushed autograph seekers aside brusquely. He was irritable and even surly.

"I ain't got no time to sign no more things," said Newsom. "I've got too much on my mind. There's plenty of things I've got to think about."

It was a new, strange Newsom, bereft of all his swagger, his bombast and his grin. And out there on the pitching mound today it was a new Newsom—not the show-boating, clowning guy baseball fans know. He was dead serious, a very practical man for those two hours and nine minutes of the ball game, and never once did he court the boos of hostile fans as has been his wont.

He pitched a good ball game—not a great one, but a good one. Even under the World Series pressure, his control was better than usual. He walked only one hitter. He looked over the batters as if surveying 'em and then went to work with great deliberation. He didn't throw even one of his sky-scraping changes of pace that is sure-fire with the crowd. He pitched overhand to the left-handers and side-armed the right-handers. He made a clever fielding play at first base and he wasn't upset by any of the eight Cincinnati hits.

On another day he might have show-boated with a five-run lead such as he had, but today there wasn't any foolishness. Today he was in the World Series and not given to chance-taking. Today he wanted to be a winning pitcher with the pressure on to the hilt and the chips stacked at their highest, and he did all right.

Proud of His 'Nine Old Men,' Baker Sees Short Series

Detroit Manager Plans to Start Schoolboy Rowe Against Reds Today

By Del Baker
Manager Detroit Tigers (INS).

Cincinnati, Oct. 2.—Those "nine old men" of mine can really pound that apple—I knew it all along, of course, but it did my heart good to see them come through again today with a typical Tiger barrage.

Paul Derringer wasn't any set-up. My players tell me that he had plenty of stuff. But we had on our hitting clothes today, and we don't plan to take them off. I thought at first that this might be a long series—six or seven games—but I've changed my mind a little. After all we've beaten the best they've got, and the victory had no flukes about it. We outhit them, outpitched them and outfielded them.

BAKER

But we're not taking the Reds lightly. They've still got Bucky Walters and Junior Thompson to throw at us, and apparently they're ready to go. And Derringer will be back before this thing is over. They're far from the quitting kind. But we'll be ready, too.

Benton for Relief

My selection for tomorrow's game here is Schoolboy Rowe, and I'll use Tommy Bridges against the Reds in Briggs Stadium Friday. If they can't go the route, and I think they can, we've got the best relief pitcher in baseball to help them out. I mean Al Benton. With all due respect for Joe Beggs, the Reds' reliefman, I'll take Benton. I've ordered Buck Newsom to report early tomorrow and do some running around the outfield. I want to keep him hot and primed.

Newsom's control was great today. He walked only one man, and was behind very few batters. But as great as he was, Buck was only a part of today's victory. Every pitcher needs support, and Newsom got plenty today.

Higgins a Stonewall

Higgins, at third, was a stonewall. He started the double play that stopped the Reds in the fourth, after Ripple scored Goodman with a single.

York came up with two nice plays, too, and I have seen few finer catches than one Barney McCosky made off Frank McCormick in the first inning. Barney went right up against the wall—in a strange ball park—to make a one-hand stab that would have bounced back for a double or triple, with Mike McCormick already on base with a double.

I think that catch might be called the turning point of the game. For it gave us a lift and got the Reds a little down. And as soon as we got up to bat and Greenberg singled to left, we were on our way

Picture Story of Opening Series Game . . .

1. A CROWD OF 31,793 FANS began to arrive at Crosley Field yesterday several hours before game time to see the National League's Cincinnati Reds and the American League's Detroit Tigers play the opening game of the 1940 World Series. Both players and rooters were favored with a bright October sun, a mild west wind and a 72-degree temperature—almost perfect baseball weather

2. BEFORE THE BATTLE, Managers Bill McKechnie (left) of the Reds and Del Baker of the Tigers, friendly enemies that they are, clasped hands and wished each other luck

3. THE MORTALITY RATE OF GRANDMOTHERS ROSE SURPRISINGLY, but Beatrice McKechnie (left) needed no better excuse to cut classes at Penn State than the fact that her dad piloted the Reds to the National League pennant. Her classmate, Dorothy Williams, sees her off to the game

4. RIVAL PITCHERS were the Tiger's Buck Newsom (left) and the Reds' Paul Derringer. It wasn't Big Paul's day, and before the game was over the Cincinnati fans were moaning the downfall of their No. 1 pitching ace. It took the Tigers only two innings to . . .

5. . . . SPOT DERRINGER'S PITCHING. In the second inning a merciless five-run attack drove him from the box. Dick Bartell, first man at bat, was his only strikeout victim

6. FIRST HOME RUN of the series was socked over the right field screen by Bruce Campbell, of the Tigers. It was in the fourth, with Moore pitching, that Campbell found the range. Pinky Higgins (6) congratulates his home-run-hitting teammate. Rudy York (4) scored before him

7. . . . IT WAS IN THE SECOND THAT THE OL' BALL GAME WAS REALLY OVER. Greenberg, first to bat in this inning, led the way with a single to left. York drove him to second with a single. Campbell loaded the bases with a bunt to third. Higgins sent the first two runs across with a single to center. Ten men batted in the inning, set the score at 5-0 and sent Derringer to the showers

Kirkwood, Greiner Win Grosner Pro-Amateur at Manor

Baltimoreans Beat Rippy, Spencer, 2-1

Champions Post 67 Best Ball in Soggy Conditions; Pros Take a Back Seat

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Two 21-year-old youngsters from the Terra Mariae Club in Baltimore, Joe Kirkwood, jr., the assistant professional, and Otto Greiner, the star amateur, walked off with the second annual Grosner Match Play Pro-Amateur championship yesterday at Manor with a 2 and 1 victory over Washington's best, Cliff Spencer and Claude Rippy.

Steadied by Greiner's consistent efforts, and with Kirkwood, son of the famous Joe Kirkwood, sr., coming through often enough to provide the winning margin, the new champions posted a best ball 67 in the title round, despite the rainy and soggy conditions. Kirkwood received $150 and Greiner a set of registered matched irons for the victory. Gerald Grosner sponsored the tournament.

The winners entered the title round with a 2-and-1 triumph over Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., pro, and Bobby Bowers, public links amateur, in the morning semifinals. The match was even for 11 holes but Greiner's 45-foot birdie putt and two holes where Coffey and Bowers failed to get pars was enough for the victory. Coffey's individual golf for the four rounds his team lasted was the best of the tournament.

Stop Walper, Haverstick

The losers advanced by stopping the march of Leo Walper and Harry Haverstick, the former Pennsylvania State champion, also by a 2 and 1 margin. Spencer ended the match on the seventeenth in dramatic fashion, as he did the day before, by holing a chip shot for an eagle deuce.

The pros took a back seat in the final round as Greiner and Rippy staged almost a two-man show. Spencer figured in on two holes, the second where he dropped a 15-foot birdie putt and the thirteenth where he chipped dead for a par. Kirkwood helped Greiner first on the sixth hole with a par, on the ninth with another par, including a great second shot through the woods, and on the twelfth where he holed a 55-foot birdie putt from one level of the green to the other.

Spencer just couldn't do anything right for the last and deciding holes. Consistently outdriving the others all day, he missed a tee shot on a crucial hole, the fifteenth, where he was the only man that could have reached the green in two. Kirkwood putted poorly, rallied to give some help and then played alternately bad and good on the back nine.

Rippy Shines

Greiner started three under par for five holes. He holed a short birdie putt on the second, reached the green on the par 5 fifth in 2 and then sunk a 5-foot birdie putt on the fifth. With par for a 32 on the ninth hole, he drove back of a tree and twice missed the ball completely playing it left handed. He halved the first two holes of the back nine when Kirkwood was out and chipped and one-putted for a vital par on the fifteenth hole.

Rippy hit the greatest shot of the day, however, a spoon on the 206-yard third hole, off a muddy tee and in a downpour of rain, that stopped a fraction of an inch short of a hole-in-one. He chipped and one-putted to halve the sixth and on the ninth hole finally halved it in fives after Spencer flubbed two straight chip shots. Rippy played the back nine with little help. He won the fourteenth when every member of the foursome hit poor chip shots and his bid for a birdie on the fifteenth lipped the cup. He and Spencer both missed par on the sixteenth.

Greiner and Kirkwood will be back Saturday morning for a medal playoff with Lewis Worsham and Ralph Bogart, the defending champions. The teams tied with 65s in Monday's qualifying round.

Cliff Spencer (East Potomac) and Claude Rippy (Washington) defeated Leo Walper (unattached) and Harry Haverstick, Lancaster, Pa., 2 and 1.

Joe Kirkwood, jr., and Otto Greiner (Terra Mariae) defeated Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., and Bobby Bowers (unattached), 2 and 1.

Kirkwood and Greiner defeated Spencer and Rippy, 2 and 1.

Favorites Bow In Upsets At Columbia

The defending champion and another highly regarded player made unexpected first-round exits in the Columbia Country Club championship yesterday as Medalist Tommy Webb ad Earle Skinker survived among the favorites.

Edgar Merkle, the 1939 champion, lost to Roy Pickford, 2 and 1, while George F. Miller, the star amateur of the year among the Columbia members, lost on the eighteenth to Wilbur Garrett, 1 up. Both losers were guilty of faulty golf.

Martin F. McCarthy was around the 76 mark, equal to the best golf of the day, as he defeated Luther Steward, jr., 2 and 1. Webb, a former champion who sold for the highest price in the Calcutta Pool, brushed aside George Ferris, 3 and 2, while Earle Skinker was taken to the seventeenth by Ray Swearingen before Skinker won, 2 and 1.

Billy Shannon played two great approach shots on the eighteenth and nineteenth holes to defeat Capt. Jesse Auton, 1 up. Shannon stuck a 50-yard approach shot within a foot of the pin to halve the eighteenth in pars and after trapping his second on the first extra hole he blasted dead to the pin for a par and a win.

McCarthy and Skinker meet in the quarter-final feature today. Shannon and Webb clash in the lower bracket feature.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Crosley Field, Cincinnati, Oct. 2.—Buck Newsom and Bruce Campbell, two workaday ball players who seemed destined to end their careers no closer to a World Series than their home town pool hall loudspeakers, sat astride the baseball world today—heroes of the first game of the 1940 classic.

CONSIDINE

Newsom, 10 years in the majors, never closer to the top than a fourth-place club, and thrice on the point of extinction with broken legs, pitched his way to victory over the great Paul Derringer.

Campbell, who has been around nearly as long and never with anything that looked like a winner and twice stricken with spinal meningitis, lashed out a home run off Whitey Moore to clinch beyond all doubt the Tiger victory.

Wandering contentedly and unnoticed through the mob of players, coaches, reporters and cameraman before the game began was an erect, gingerly old man. He had a grandstand ticket clamped damply in a wrinkled paw. After a while he sat down on the edge of the Cincinnati bench, and Bill McKechnie, looking up, exclaimed, "Hello, Cy." It was Cy Young, who pitched for 20-odd years, beginning in the late '80's and finishing up his league career in 1912. But he pitched for years after that. As late as 1934, when he was 60, we saw him under tragic circumstances. He was touring with a sorry outfit of semi-pros in a home-made station wagon. They were to play in a little Virginia town. He dressed in a plumbingless shed, putting his uniform on over an old-fashioned suit of heavy underwear.

He went out and warmed up, too, lobbing the ball easily to a catcher with whispers of his old form. But he didn't play that day. The kids who were the hosts, so to speak, couldn't put up a $50 guarantee for Young's team. So the old man put his store-bought suit back on again and left with his scabrous outfit. The kids heckled them as they left, but old Cy didn't seem to mind much. He had played the night before in Baltimore for $8.

He went back to his Ohio farm after that. But now he is not working it. He's "jus' taking things easy," he told us. He fell naturally into talking about the past. Said that Cobb, Wagner, Crawford, Lajoie and Delehanty would be great stars today, but allowed he wasn't one to see nothing good about modern pitchers.

"We had some advantages they don't have now," the grey-eyed old boy said. "We'd only use two, three or four baseballs a game. I know of a case where only one was used . . . so natch'ally the balls would be scarred up and dirty and you could do a little more with 'em." Which doesn't take away from the fact that Young won the awesome total of 511 big league games.

"I never got up to $5,000 salary in one year," old Cy mused, peering out at the bench warmers and so-so athletes who will get more than that just for this series. "Fellows just didn't get good pay in those days. We worked a lot harder too." We asked him whom he would pick between Ruth and Cobb, as his all-time ball player. There wasn't any hesitation in the old man's voice now. He said, "Cobb, of course."

AN ALL-TIME HIGH FOR INOPPORTUNISM was set during the big Tiger second inning. With the sound of base hits making the populace cower, and Bengals galloping around the sacks, a plane roared low overhead, dragging a fluttering sign which read: GO TO IT, REDS.

Series Shorts: Al Schacht has things pretty well tied up. He's clowning here before the games, and working in a Detroit nightclub. Commutes by plane . . . Window seats in nearby factories cost $1, as do bleacher seats erected on top of other nearby buildings . . . "Who said the Yanks aren't in the series," a guy yelled during the 5-run Tiger inning.

C. U. Eleven Off to Detroit, and Not for the World Series with Walters in the box.

Five of their ten hits the Tigers packed into that second inning against Derringer. All were singles. The Tigers were not as yet letting the Cincinnati pitching feel the long-distance power in their bats. That was to come.

The game was not without its Detroit home run. But it did not rocket from the bat of Hank Greenberg or Rudy York. Outfielder Bruce Campbell, a refugee from the Cleveland Indians, produced the homer. It was the after-part of a one-two punch. Rudy York bumped one of Whity Moore's pitches for a long triple against the right field screen in the fifth and then Campbell swatted Moore's next pitch far into the right center bleachers to deposit two more runs to the Tigers' account and lift Newsom's lead to 7-1 at that point.

No Clowning for Buck

It was a dead-serious Newsom who held the Reds to eight hits. No clowning, no buffoonery. The World Series chance he had yearned since breaking into the majors eleven years ago he turned to clever account. The impish and incongruous grin of the big fellow was gone as he bent to his task with a blazing fast ball and superb control.

Newsom walked only one batter. Precious few reached the 3-and-2 count against him. He was mixing his overhand fast ball sometimes with a side-arm curve against the Red's batting order that contained only two left-handed hitters, aside from the two men who scored against him, not another Red reached third base.

The second-inning horror for Cincinnati fans was two-fold. They saw not only the Tigers take liberties with the pitching of big Derringer, their prime World Series hope, but they saw the Reds' supposedly superior defense crack in that second inning which produced two Cincinnati errors.

For Cincinnati it was the frustration of 1939 by the Yankees all over again. It's best pitcher was beaten and the Reds had nothing to match the hits that lurked in the Detroit bats. With big Ernie Lombardi and Second Baseman Lonnie Frey out of the game, the Reds' batting order was riddled of much of its power.

In paradoxical contrast to the three errors of the reputedly smart-fielding Reds was the sparkling defense the Tigers threw up behind Newsom.

For Derringer, it was one more exhibition of his World Series woes. Today for the fourth time in his career he was beaten in a World Series, with no victories as yet to his credit. The Tigers feasted on both his fast ball and curve and eight batters faced him in that second inning before Moore was rushed to the scene to retire the last two hitters.

Derringer Applauded

Like a pholosophic old campaigner, Derringer walked out of the ball game with his head still proudly held high. Entering the dug out, he turned for one more quizzical look at the Detroit gang who had murdered his pitching that had won 20 National League victories this season. Faithful Cincinnati fans applauded until he disappeared from view.

Here is the story of that second inning, the story of the ball game. The assault commenced when Hank Greenberg lashed a long single into left field, and York pounded a single to center that moved Greenberg to third. Bruce Campbell laid down the conventional sacrifice bunt and the customers sustained their first shock, Third Baseman Bill Werber pulled Joost, who was covering first, off the bag with his throw and the bases were filled on the error.

Then it was that Higgins fired the first productive shot—a single to center that sent Greenberg and York clumping over the plate. The next development was another shock. Derringer, the control pitcher, walked Catcher Bill Sullivan on four straight pitches and again the bases were filled.

The Reds threatened to halt the damage at two runs when Buck Newsom grounded to McCormick who nipped Campbell at the plate in his attempt to score from third base, but it was only a respite. Dick Bartell singled to center off a curve ball, and Campbell and Sullivan scored. Barney McCosky delivered the fifth hit of the inning and scored Newsom with the fifth run.

That was the exit point for Derringer and the tow-headed Moore came in to get the side out.

through the middle. Campbell shot a vicious single into center field. Higgins struck out and Campbell was doubled trying to steal second, Wilson to Joost. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

REDS—Moore was loudly applauded as he came to the plate, but grounded out, York to Newsom, who covered first. Werber flied to Campbell in right center. M. McCormick fouled off the first two pitches, and struck out but had to be thrown out, Sullivan to York. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

FOURTH INNING

TIGERS—Sullivan raised a high fly to Joost on the outfield grass behind second. Newsom raised three fouls and struck out. Bartell walked on five pitches. McCosky drove a single that struck second base and rolled into center field, advancing Bartell to third. Gehringer grounded to Joost. No runs, one hit, no errors, two left.

REDS—Goodman led off by driving the first pitch into center field for a double. F. McCormick popped to Gehringer behind first base. Ripple singled sharply to right, scoring Goodman from second base. Wilson grounded into a double play, Higgins to Gehringer to York. One run, two hits, no errors, none left.

FIFTH INNING

TIGERS—Greenberg struck out as the crowd roared. York tripled against the right field fence about 370 feet from home plate, Goodman making a futile jump for the ball. Campbell then lined a home run into the bleachers in right center field scoring York ahead of him. With the count two and two, Higgins lifted a high fly to Ripple who made the catch with his back almost against the center field scoreboard. Sullivan struck out. Two runs, two hits, no errors, none left.

REDS—Joost singled through the box and into center field. Myers was called out on strikes. Moore struck out, fanning on a bad pitch outside, and Sullivan threw to Bartell trying to double Joost in an attempted steal, but Bartell dropped the ball and Joost was safe. Werber waited out a three-and-two count and then grounded to Higgins, York taking the throw on the baseline and tagging Werber. No runs, one hit, one error, one left.

SIXTH INNING

TIGERS—Newsom was thrown out by Werber. Bartell was called out on strikes. F. McCormick came in running to take McCosky's pop up. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

REDS—M. McCormick swung late on the first pitch and popped to Gehringer on the outfield grass. Newsom was working slowly, taking time to pick up the dust on the mound between pitches. Goodman popped to Bartell. Newsom got two strikes on F. McCormick and then walked him. Ripple raised a pop foul near the Detroit dugout and Sullivan gathered it in. No runs, no hits, no errors, one left.

SEVENTH INNING

TIGERS—Moore walked Gehringer, the fourth ball being a wild pitch, but Gehringer was not able to get beyond first. Greenberg struck out for the second straight time as the crowd hooted, Moore throwing his fast ball past the slugger twice. Moore got behind, two and nothing, but waited out a base on balls. (The paid attendance was announced at 31,793.) Moore, his control apparently gone, walked Campbell on five pitches, to fill the bases. Joe Beggs, Cincinnati's ace relief pitcher, immediately went into action in the pull pen. Higgins popped to F. McCormick near the pitcher's box. Goodman made a sensational one-handed catch of Sullivan's liner into deep right field. No runs, no hits, no errors, three left.

REDS—Riggs batted for Wilson and struck out on four pitches. Joost lined to left field and Greenberg reached up and speared the ball. Myers raised a high fly to Campbell. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

EIGHTH INNING

TIGERS—Baker entered the game as catcher for the Reds. Myers came over behind second base to get Newsom's grounder and throw him out. Bartell singled sharply to right center. McCosky forced M. McCormick back almost to the bleachers in right center to catch his fly. Bartell attempted to steal second and Baker's throw was low, bounding into center field and Bartell reached third. (No stolen base). Gehringer lined to M. McCormick. No runs, one hit, one error, one left.

REDS—Craft batted for Moore. Craft flied high to Greenberg just inside the left field foul line. Werber drove a double between McCosky and Campbell in right center as both fielders slowed up. M. McCormick grounded to York, who beat him to first to make the put-out unassisted. Werber took third on the play. Goodman smashed a clean single into center field scoring Werber. F. McCormick raised a high fly to McCosky. One run, two hits, no errors, one left.

NINTH INNING

TIGERS—Riddle came in to pitch for Cincinnati. Baker ran up to the edge of Cincinnati's dugout to take Greenberg's foul. York was called out on strikes. Campbell struck out. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

REDS—Ripple flied to Greenberg. Baker singled off Newsom's glove, barely beating the pitcher's throw to first. Joost grounded to Higgins, forcing Baker at second, Higgins to Gehringer, beating the throw to first. Myers flied to Campbell. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Gonzaga, Devitt Game Postponed

Rain cheated Gonzaga and Devitt Prep out of a scheduled renewal of their old rivalry yesterday at Central stadium, and as a result the game will not be played this year.

Neither of the schools, which have not met on the gridiron in five years, had an open date in their schedules, so a postponement could not be effected.

Bullis Prep plays host to Blackstone Military Academy today at 3:30 p. m. at Silver Spring in the day's only high school football game.

Ackerman On Fishing

There has been considerable talk about the large trout being caught in the Patuxent, due to the oystering. It is true smaller fish follow tongers to get the tiny crustacea and worms released during the operation; often following the tongs to the surface. Whether larger fish, and particularly trout, do the same, is a moot question. We have the idea they would avoid the tongers because of the considerable amount of silt released in the water.

ACKERMAN

Over the week-end many anglers fished the Patuxent in the neighborhood of Broom's Island for these large fall-run trout, mostly with little success.

Bob Bell was one of the few exceptions, mainly because he had the good sense to try what most anglers would pass by. With most of his large assortment of peelers, soft crabs and bloodworms taken by the hordes of tiny spot, he moved up to Island Creek, where in a short time, with cut spot for bait, he caught 11 trout. Everyone of them 3 pounds or better.

The Patuxent at this time of the year produces some really fine trout fishing, but always, we have found the best going on the lumps at the creeks mouths; in water from 30 to 40-foot deep.

A report from Capt. Lev Raymond, tuna-fishing out of Brielle, that the boats are picking up a few small blues, none of them over 4 pounds, and hoping for a run of large ones.

Highly improbable now, for the vanguard of the schools making their Southern hegira have already appeared on the Florida coast. Anglers, during the past week, caught them at Government Cut, Bakers Haulover and at Jensen and Jupiter. The main run is seldom more than a couple of weeks in back of the first run.

The little 6-ounce codfish which, since early spring has held first place in the George Ruppert contest with $250 on its nose has finally been relegated to second place by the entry of a 11½-pounder. The little fellow, however, is still worth a hundred smackers.

An entry arrived this past week that will bid high in the outstanding achievement classification. It was a 52-pound sailfish caught by a woman angler from Capt. Nel Edwards' Julie Anna off Palm Beach. As Douglas Mann, the mate, took the leader to boat the fish the hook pulled out. He jumped overboard after it and managed to hold it in his arms until both he and the fish were boated.

Harry Burns, of Baltimore, is still credited with the catch of a 143½-pound white marlin, and is leading the class for a $250 first-place prize with it. As a matter of fact, his fish was an Allison tuna, caught from Capt. Hall's Cutty Sark. The largest marlin caught at Ocean City this season weighed 114 pounds, and was taken by a Washington angler.

Plummer, Newman Meet Zaharias Brothers on Mat

"Gentleman Lou" Plummer and Eddie Newman will continue their reign of terror as a two-man team tonight at Turner's Arena. They will meet the wild and woolly Zaharias brothers, Chris and Babe, in a feature wrestling bout in which two referees—for the first time—will be in the ring.

Plummer and Newhan had asked Promoter Turner to use two arbiters contending that one man just couldn't handle the assignment. And Turner upheld their protest.

As a result Curly Brown, a new official from New York, who did all right by himself in disqualifying Plummer in the bout with Warren Bockwindle last week, and Casey (Cornie) Berger, the Iowan, will be the referees.

This will be the first match between the two teams, and Promoter Turner is leaving nothing undone to please the participants.

Jubilant Newsom Allows Team Should Triumph in 4 Games

backs chasing those powerful drives the Tigers sent to the walls of Crosley Field.

Boastful Buck Newsom praised the Red batters, declaring they never were licked and that he had to watch every pitch.

Baker proudly presented to Newsom the ball Bruce Campbell caught for the final Cincinnati out.

There was a silent, but firm air of "tomorrow is another day" in the beaten Reds' clubhouse.

Somebody who signed himself a "Greenville (O.) Knocker," sent a telegram saying, "Thanks for returning my check and no tickets. Didn't want me to witness the slaughter. Some team you have."

Manager Bill McKechnie just grinned.

"That's what it takes to keep the world going around," said he. "The guy must have wanted to come pretty bad."

"We'll be back tomorrow," he added.

McKechnie stoutly defended the work of Big Paul Derringer, whom the Tigers combed for about everything he had in the second inning.

"Those boys hit some mighty good pitches," he explained. "Paul had as much stuff as he ever had, but they just got on to it."

Hoyas Hold Final Drill Today Before First Big Test

Play Temple Tomorrow in Philadelphia

Hilltop Pep Meeting Tonight; Cardinals Announce Starting Line-up for Detroit U.

Georgetown University students and backers of the first undefeated eleven in Hoya history will gather at the Quadrangle of the University for a pep rally tonight at 6:45 p. m. The team leaves tomorrow afternoon for the night clash with the powerful Temple Owls, in Philadelphia.

The student band will play for the rally, that will be shifted inside in case of inclement weather. Coach Jack Hagerty and several players will be the principal speakers.

The squad of 34 players will be followed to the Quaker City by several hundred rooters, who will make the trip on special excursion rates.

The team went through a light workout indoors yesterday and, weather permitting, will stage the final outdoor drill before their first major test this afternoon. Trainer Harry Crowley will examine two junior backs, Ben Bulvin and Frank Dornfield, to determine whether they will see action against Temple.

C. U. Star Back Misses Detroit Trip

Hank Sant' Ambrogio, Catholic University halfback, was left behind, due to an injured back, as the Cardinals left for Detroit yesterday afternoon and the sixth meeting with Coach Dorais' Titans tomorrow night.

The team will arrive at 8:15 this morning, hold a blackboard session in the hotel and a final drill under the lights of the Stadium tonight.

Head Coach Dutch Bergman announced the C. U. starting line-up:

The starting line-up to be used against the Titans as announced by Coach Bergman is as follows: Joe Carrig and Bredan Stymes, at ends; Julius Stanges and Casimir Ksycewski, tackles; Mike Cherello and John Schroder, guards, and Tim Murname, center. Pete Sachon will be at quarterback with Charlie Moutenot and Capt. Hank Brostek at the halfback positions and Al Norris at fullback.

Terp Coaches Study Two Line-up Changes

Maryland coaches are considering two minor line-up changes for Saturday afternoon's game with the University of Pennsylvania. Luther Conrad, running guard, is pressing Frank Heyer for the right guard post while Dick Shaffer and Jack Mueller are still battling for the starting berth at right end.

Jack Gilmore, former Tech High gridder, has been out with a leg injury but he is expected back to back up Mearle DuVall at left halfback.

Return of August Cheers Colonials

Rain chased Bill Reinhart's George Washington team indoors for a light blocking drill in preparation for tomorrow night's clash with Manhattan in New York.

The head coach was cheered by the news that Frank August was ready to start at right end after being held out of the Mount St. Mary's game due to a leg injury. Hardly cheering, however, was news from the Jaspar camp that Bill Proch, regular halfback in 1939, and Tony Viskovich, star sophomore fullback, would play for the first time against G. W.

Thatcher, Shaw Back In Form at A. U.

Good news, scarce in the American University grid camp, was on hand yesterday as Coach Staff Cassell learned Dave Thatcher and Jim Shaw would be ready as the Eagles end Susquehanna open relations Saturday in Suslingsgroce, Pa.

Thatcher scored the only touchdown of the season last year while Shaw, a fullback, is one of the best defensive backs on the team. A squad of 35 will leave Friday afternoon, the biggest A. U. delegation in years.

Susquehanna defeated U. of Buffalo last week, 20-7.

Pacific Gridders Work in Arizona

Winslow, Ariz., Oct. 2 (AP).—Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg and his College of Pacific football squad stopped off today for a 90-minute drill while en route to South Bend, Ind., for Saturday's game with Notre Dame.

Stagg and his players appeared in high spirits during a session devoted to signal drills, punting and passing. The veteran mentor reported his squad in good condition.

Another practice session is scheduled tomorrow in Newton, Kans.

Navy Works In Quagmire For Cincinnati

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 2.—Navy's gridiron forces, prepping for Saturday's game with the University of Cincinnati, worked out in a quagmire today as the result of heavy rains last night, to get used to handling a wet ball.

The drill was featured by a defensive scrimmage against the shock troops, the latter using Cincinnati formations. Assistant Coaches Ray Schwartz, and Lieut. Harold Davies, scouted the Ohioans in their 7-to-0 victory over Louisville last Saturday.

The Cincinnatians have a clever passing team, according to the Navy "sleuths," what with such backs as Donald Davis, Malloy Dixon, "touchdown king" and pass receiver, and Lonchar, a tailback, who, however, may not see action against the Middies. Davis and Dixon are backs of light caliber, but are fast and shifty.

Navy's defense against passing has been one of its chief weaknesses for several years, and the Cincinnati combination is calculated to give the home team trouble. Of the forward wall, Tom Maloney, 190-pound left tackle, is held to be a topnotcher, while Otto Oppenheimer, 200-pound right tackle and captain of the Bearcats, is said to be well above the average in punting, in addition to his defensive qualifications.

Bluege, Welaj Are Married In Separate Ceremonies

Nats' Coach Married in Martinsburg, W. Va.; Welaj Marries Miss Pauline Gertrude Smith

Matrimony reduced the number of Nats in the single ranks by two yesterday as Oswald Louis Bluege, a veteran Washington baseball player now on the coaching staff, and John Ludwig Welaj, who has just concluded his second year, were married in separate ceremonies.

Bluege was married in Martinsburg, W. Va., to Miss Wilor Marie Maxwell, daughter of the late Dr. George S. and Mrs. Mary Maxwell, of Washington.

The ceremony, culminating a romance that blossomed in the offices of the Nats at Griffith Stadium where the former Miss Maxwell was secretary to Edward B. Eynon, secretary of the Nats, was performed by the Rev. Clarence H. Corkran, formerly of Washington.

George S. Maxwell, the bride's brother, gave her in marriage, while her bridesmaid was Miss Jane Phelps. The bridegroom's best man was Albert Shaw. All are of Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Bluege left immediately after the ceremony on a trip North.

Welaj's new bride is the former Miss Pauline Gertrude Smith, daughter of Mrs. Edmund R. Smith, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. They were married at St. Matthews by the Rev. J. Gerald Cole.

Miss Smith was given in marriage by Charles W. Havlena, and Miss Esther N. Douglas was maid of honor. William J. Heneghan was best man. A breakfast at the Hotel Washington followed the ceremony.

Joe Schenck Battles Through Mud to Take Belmont Feature

Woolf Horse Beats Nitro By a Neck

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Joe Schenck, sporting the Woolford Farm Silks of Herbert M. Woolf, splashed home a neck winner of the 7-furlong Vosburgh Handicap, which had its initial running here this rainy, windy afternoon. H. F. Guggenheim's Nitro was second, a length and a half before Joe W. Brown's Fall Highweight Handicap winner and favorite, T. M. Dorsett. Foxbrough and Roman Flag completed the small field in that order.

Joe Schenck, a fast-closing third in the Fall Highweight, kept closer up in today's running and outlasted Nitro to take down a purse of $4,400. His backers, who made the Insco 5-year-old second choice, received $3.40 for $2. The track had a firm bottom beneath the water, as the victor's time of 1:23 1-5 testifies.

The second smallest crowd for Belmont this year disregarded the elements, 5,663 passing through the gates. The low mark of 5,336 came on the thrid day of the current meeting, also cold and rainy. On that day, a low betting handle of $379,365 was recorded. Today's play was likely to come close to that figure, with only $269,519 bet on the first six events.

Nitro, returning to top form, set the pace into the stretch. Joe Schenck moved closest to the leader after the first quarter-mile, during which Roman Flag and T. M. Dorsett had the ultimate winner headed. It was Joe Schenck and Nitro heads apart all through the stretch, with R. L. Vedder finally urging the Woolf color-bearer into a narrow advantage while racing along the rail. T. M. Dorsett easily topped the other two contestants.

BROWN SAXON raced head and head with REMARKABLE, dropped back in midstretch, responded to pressure and came up on rail in final jumps. REMARKABLE was hard handled to maintain lead over BROWN SAXON, drew clear approaching eighth pole and tired right at close. DUDIE closed with good energy from sluggish beginning. PRAIRIE DOG came willingly in final test.

Daily Double, TAMIL and BROWN SAXON, Paid $243.50

STIMADY, rated early, came to inside to take command with bold rush and was running easy at close. LIGHT OF MORN, under a helpful ride, set pace and held on gamely, but was no match for winner. SOBRIQUET was keen forward factor from beginning and held on with good courage. CIS MARION could not keep up early and closed with good energy.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $7,500 added. The Capital Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:36. Off 3:36½. JAY JAY, steadied while close up and kept clear on outside, responded gamely when put to pressure, disposed of ROMAN and was kept to drive to stave off PICTOR. The latter was forced to race on inside early, was taken out and responded to pressure to be wearing down winner at end. ROMAN set pace to stretch and tired gradually. DR. WHINNY had early speed and faltered.

Selections at Laurel

Dear Al:

The Maryland Racing Writers have made W. L. Brann, owner and breeder of Challedon, an honorary member. Brann, whose farm is at Wafkersville, Md., is the second turfman so honored. A. G. Vanderbilt was first. Meeting both before and after tackling some of Stevens' No. 1 steak, the writers decided to hold their annual frolic in Baltimore on November 13 and reelected three officers. They are Edgar G. Horn (Turf and Sport Digest) president; Don Reed (Baltimore Sun), vice president, and Humphrey Finney (Maryland Horse), secretary-treasurer. Laurel pops up with a good publicity department. Here's some of the notes turned out yesterday. James Butler, head man at Laurel and Empire City, came down from New York to lend a hand in preparing for the opening and also to entertain a number of guests at dinner. Three of the largest strings on the grounds are those of Milky Way Farm, Mrs. Emil Denemark and J. P. Jones. Each has more than a score of horses fit and ready to run. The Denemark stars include Equistar, Prairie Dog, Super Chief, Court Dance, Colorado Ore and the good 2-year-old Modulator. Roy Waldron, Milky Way trainer, has nine juveniles in his barn, in addition to such noted performers as Galahadion, Up the Creek, No Competition and Tough Hombre. Jones, who trains for several owners, has Conquer and Box Flag for handicap events and a half dozen useful 2-year-olds. Dave (Red) Womeldorff, the Denemark trainer, is leading the country's conditioners at the moment and threatening to end the long reign of Hirsch Jacobs at the top of the trainers' list and Red hopes to add considerably to his total of victories during the session. Trainer Howard Wells arrived from Narragansett Park with a stable of 11 horses, which race for several interests. Skeets Justin, exercise boy for the E. K. Bryson stable, suffered a broken collar bone in a spill while working out a horse at Bel Air, according to word reaching here. R. C. Waple sold War Port, a jumper, to M. Caselier in a private transaction. Jockey Charley Stevenson was an arrival from Chicago and immediately swung into action. Galt Davis was out yesterday and Art Brown will be out today. The mutuel clerks are rubbing their hands in anticipation of getting a grip on some of that Brown's dough. See you on the rail.—Bill.

First Race—Stolen Tryst beat most of the contenders in this heat when second behind Crepe Myrtle at Havre. She has displayed her ability to run in the mud which makes her appear well placed. Carriage Trade was right behind the top horse in that race and will be the one to beat. Dominal might better her last.

Second Race—Haste Back has been knocking close in recent races in New York when pitted against high-grade platers. Lightly weighted here, she looks good to beat Pete, Jr., which is counted upon to carry most of the public's money on the merits of his second behind Curious Coin last out. Hornblende figures to be close.

Third Race—High Bud won his last Havre race in a gallop by four lengths over a heavy strip. Meeting a similar band of cheap ones and with track conditions in his favor, he should prove hard to beat. Chatabit can better a poor showing at Havre and should like the mud. Broomoria displayed fair efforts in New York.

Fourth Race—Tanganyika is dropping down in this event and though beaten ten lengths by Brown Twig last start his mud rating moves him up sufficiently to receive the call in this field. Braxton raced well behind Boat's Crew and might be dangerous. Dark Friend could threaten with his best effort.

Fifth Race — Chatted was no match for Roman in New York recently but previously showed a good effort racing against Stoney Brush. In good hands, he gets the call in an open race. Rollo has been performing creditably in good company but has been quitting. Raise Up will move up in the mud.

Sixth Race—Neditca has been placed over her head in recent New York efforts but going back to Saratoga the charts reveal that this consistent filly was hard to beat in the $2,500 claiming class. Blazing Heat won her last and might be hard to catch. Shailleen is in winning form but moves up.

Seventh Race—Darby Du was victor by a neck when he got up in the final stride to beat Nilon at Havre. The longer route of today's race should cinch his margin of victory. Room Service also won her last and figures best for the runner-up position ahead of Nilon.

Best bet—High Bud.

Oil Companies Ordered From Hanoi Airport

Japanese Notify U. S., British Firms Stocks Must Be Out in 2 Days

By the Associated Press

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Oct. 2. American and British oil companies were instructed today to remove their stocks from Hanoi airfield within the next two days to make way for Japanese occupation under the Vichy-Tokyo accord.

The Japanese assumption of "limited" military facilities at three air bases in Tonkin State (Northern Indo-China), including Hanoi's, as well as on Tonkin's railways, moved swiftly and smoothly toward conclusion.

These facilities will offer the Japanese means for an offensive into southwest China—an attempt to conclude the "China incident," as the Japanese call their three-year-old war with the forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

New Mission Chief Due

Maj. Gen. Raishiro Sumita, of the Japanese army, is due to arrive tomorrow to replace Maj. Gen. Issaku Nishihara as chief of the Japanese mission which negotiated details of the French concessions.

French quarters also expect arrival tomorrow of two emissaries of the Japanese South China army from Canton to speed negotiations for return of French troops now in Japanese-occupied Langson, a short way within the northern border.

Moving across the border from Kwangsi Province, China, on September 22, Japanese army units clashed with the French and took Langson. This was not provided for in the Japanese-French negotiations. Some of the French withdrew through Japanese lines ringing Langson, but others stayed there, prisoners of "war."

All But 6,000 Troops Leave

Observers at Haiphong said that several thousand soldiers, presumably especially trained shock troops who landed there September 26, sailed from that port yesterday, leaving only 6,000 men, the number called for in the agreement to garrison the three Tonkin air bases.

The Japanese also were reported to have returned to the French the coastal defense batteries at Haiphong which they took over without resistance to safeguard the landing.

"All or Nothing," Japan Warns

Tokyo (Thursday), Oct. 3 (U.P.).—The newspaper Asahi warned Britain and America today that if they ban oil, rubber and tin exports to Japan, the Japanese would choose an "all or nothing struggle," rather than "waiting for death."

The newspaper said there was an opportunity for Anglo-American reflection toward eliminating unnecessary international friction, but added that the new tripartite pact most likely will cause a stiffening instead of a relenting of Anglo-American Far Eastern policies.

Other items added by the committee included $590,000 for a new Navy building in Arlington, $152,000 for operation of the new Washington airport and $812,000 for new Coast Guard ship ways at Curtis Bay, Md.

President May Visit Pittsburgh Area

President Roosevelt has tentative plans to visit the Pittsburgh area on October 11 to inspect national defense facilities and to dedicate the new Harrisburg-Pittsburgh super-highway, it was reported yesterday.

If carried out, the trip will be the President's eighth tour of defense inspection. White House Secretary, Stephen T. Early stressed that the Pittsburgh plan was tentative.

The President may also extend the trip to include Wright Field at Dayton, Ohio, before returning to Washington.

GOP Again Blocks Early Recess Plans

By International News Service

Republicans yesterday again blocked Democratic plans for early recess of Congress by insisting that it "remain on the job during the emergency."

Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, Republican floor leader, left town and told Democratic leaders he would not return until Monday.

Speaker Rayburn and Senate Majority Leader Barkley conferred and later said they would try to bring about a four-week recess next week when Martin returns.

Martin went to Cleveland to join Wendell Willkie.

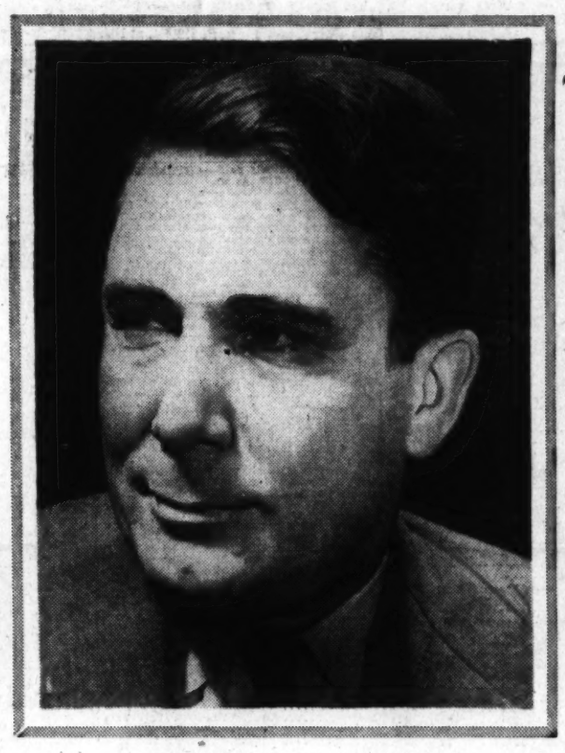
Is Willkie GAINING OR LOSING?



HOW HAS Wendell Willkie's first major campaign tour affected his popularity among the voters? Has he regained some of the votes which went to Roosevelt during the past month, or is public sentiment still switching to the President?

This Sunday The Washington Post will publish the Gallup Poll's fourth State-by-State survey. It will give you an up-to-the-minute picture of how the States would vote if the election were held today. On September 20 the Gallup Poll in The Post showed the President leading in 38 States with a total of 453 electoral votes and 55% of the popular vote. In many of the Eastern States, however, the race was so close that a slight shift would substantially alter the picture. Has this shift occurred? Have the events of the past two weeks affected Mr. Roosevelt's leadership? See the Gallup Poll in Sunday's Washington Post for the answers.

Remember, the GALLUP POLL is the only Nationwide survey of public opinion which has been proved accurate in national, State, and local elections for five consecutive years. In Washington ONLY The Post gives you the Gallup Poll.

Crucible Steel Stockholders Block Merger

Minority Group Claims Plan Would Wipe Out Accrued Dividends

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 2 (AP).—Eight preferred stockholders obtained today an order temporarily restraining the Crucible Steel Co. of America from acting on its proposed merger with its wholly-owned subsidiary, the Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Co.

Vice Chancellor James J. Fielder issued the order blocking the proposed move by the New Jersey corporation pending a court hearing Monday.

A special stockholders' meeting had been called for tomorrow to vote on plans for the transaction.

The stockholders, claiming to represent 410 of 238,000 preferred shares, charged that the proposed merger would wipe out accrued dividends amounting to $10,149,000 last October 1 and would force them to accept new stock not having the value of their present holdings.

The Crucible Steel Co. of America reported net earnings of $2,803,000 for the year 1939. Net earnings for the first six months of 1940 were listed as $2,404,833.73.

Stockholders filing the suit were Josephine and Rosemary Hager, Alma S. Fondenes, Emmas B. McBride, Gertrude Murphy and Thomas M. Marshall, jr., all of Pittsburgh, and Mary and Martha Miller, of Aliquippa, Pa.

Pennroad Replies To 3 Suits Filed By Stockholders

Philadelphia, Oct. 2 (AP).—Pennroad Corporation, an affiliate of the Pennsylvania Railroad, denied categorically in answers to three independent suits in Federal court today that there were any improprieties or irregularities in the handling of its funds.

Three suits, filed separately by three stockholders during the past year, asked for an accounting of their investment of $141,285,000 in the securities of the corporation.

The stockholders charged that the voting trustees of the Pennroad and some of its officers and directors, who held interlocking posts with the railroad, specifically "lost" $13,000,000 and "many more millions" yet to be computed, in trying to help the Pennsylvania Railroad secure domination in the Eastern area of the United States.

The stockholders are Mrs. Ione M. Overfield, of Salt Lake City, Utah; Grace Stein Weigle, Chicago, and David Steckler, New York City.

London Stocks

London, Oct. 2 (AP).—The securities market took frequent air raid interruptions in its stride today and prices continued to point upward. A fair amount of business was transacted. Kaffirs provided most action. Industrial leaders attracted attention, particularly tobacco, brewery, store and building issues. Coppers were aided by the increase in the final common dividend announced by Rosan Antelope. Oils tended upward. British government bonds finished with some bumper gains.

A.T.&T. Shows Sharp Increase In Telephones

New York, Oct. 2.—A gain of 109,900 telephones in service during September was reported today by principal subsidiaries of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

In the previous month a gain of 66,300 phones was reported.

The sharp September rise was attributed to faster general business activity in the United States, although usually there is a pronounced gain in new subscribers at this time of year. In September, 1939, an increase of 93,900 phones was reported.

For the first nine 1940 months additional phones put in service aggregated 647,500, compared with 527,300 in the like 1939 period.

Coast Utility Files $108,000,000 Issue For Registration

By the Associated Press

Southern California Edison Co., Ltd., Los Angeles, filed with the Securities Commission yesterday a registration statement covering $108,000,000 of 3 per cent first and refunding mortgage bonds, due September 1, 1965.

It was one of the largest issues to be registered with the commission since its inception in 1934. The next largest registration lately was one totaling $105,000,000, offered by Bethlehem Steel Corporation last winter.

Southern California Edison said that proceeds from the proposed bond issue would be applied to the redemption on January 1, 1941, at 105, of $73,000,000 principal amount of 3¾ per cent first and refunding mortgage gold bonds, due 1960, and of $35,000,000 principal amount of 3¾ per cent first and refunding mortgage gold bonds, series B, due 1960.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 2 (AP).—Profit taking attracted by price gains ranging up to 5 cents during the past month proved to be too much of a burden for the wheat market to absorb today without giving up a bit of the ground covered recently.

Quotations were fractionally lower most of the session, backing down as much as ¾-⅞ cent at one stage and closing ⅝-¾ lower than yesterday. December 81⅞@82, May 81½@81¾. The market got some support from mills but selling was prompted not so much by this urge to accept profits but also by sluggish flour business and a price decline at Buenos Aires.

Corn closed unchanged to ⅜ off. December 58, May 56½; oats ⅛ higher; soybeans 3-1⅞ lower; rye ⅛-¾ down and lard 5-10 lower.

Corn trade was quiet, with the market steadied by holding of spot premiums. Some sample white new corn was quoted at 60½ cents and shippers sold 63,000 bushels.

Weakness of soybeans was attributed to hedging, with country offerings reported to be improving and harvest expected to be in full swing next week. Rye followed wheat.

Lard was depressed by the larger than expected October 1 supply in storage here.

SEC Asserts Utility Powers Exceed Court's

Statement of Policy Issued in A. G. & E. Case in U. S. Tribunal

The Securities and Exchange Commission, apparently taking issue with the Federal courts, yesterday asserted its authority to regulate utilities and specifically the bankrupt Associated Gas & Electric Corporation, even though the utilities might be in process of court reorganization.

The SEC appended a strongly worded policy statement to an order allowing Northeastern Water & Electric Corporation, an A. G. & E. subsidiary, to sell $1,000,000 in promissory notes, but forbidding the utility to pay out any common stock dividends until the promissory note is paid in full.

Two weeks ago Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell, of New York, before whom the A. G. & E. reorganization is pending, had characterized the restrictions SEC placed on Northeastern as "shackles upon the business judgment of the trustees," and termed the conditions "unreasonable."

Replying to Judge Leibell without mentioning his name, the SEC yesterday declared:

"That Associated Gas & Electric Corporation is under the supervision of a Federal court sitting in bankruptcy, through trustees in bankruptcy, does not in any way relieve us of our statutory duties under the Holding Company Act. It is still our plain duty to protect the direct public investors—including the public holders of bonds and preferred stocks—of the subsidiaries of that company."

The SEC supported its determination to continue regulating the bankrupt utility system formerly headed by Howard C. Hopson, by declaring:

"Without doubt, the maximum of those abuses explicitly condemned by Congress in the statute (Utility Act), and which it directed this Commission to prevent, existed in the Associated Gas and Electric System. The gross injuries done to investors as a result of the financial structures erected by the past management are a matter of common notoriety."

Denying any intention to encroach on powers of the bankruptcy court, the commission said that nevertheless it believes it was plainly instructed by Congress to continue regulation of a utility system that is being reorganized and of its subsidiaries.

The SEC's order, issued simultaneously with the policy statement, placed restrictions on sale by Northeastern of a three-year promissory note for $1,000,000.

Editor Addresses Life Underwriter

One hundred and twenty members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association heard Associate Editor A. R. Jaqua, C. L. U., of Diamond Life Bulletins, discuss the future of life insurance as the association opened its nineteenth year with a luncheon yesterday at the Lee Sheraton Hotel.

"Forty per cent of those buying life insurance in 1939 owned no other insurance on their lives," Mr. Jaqua said. His topic was "What Are We Waiting For?"

Chairman David S. Bethune, of the association's membership committee, outlined a plan to double the association's membership within 12 months. Harold D. Krafft, dean of the Life Insurance Institute, announced that classes would begin next Monday at Hotel Lee Shearton, with tomorrow set as registration time.

John D. Marsh, of Lincoln National Life, presided at the luncheon.

Stocks Surprise 'Theorists,' Close Strong; Shipbuilding, Rails and Steels Are Leaders

New York, Oct. 2.—A strong close in the final half hour of trading on the New York Stock Exchange today kept the market pointed upward. The average price added another 0.30 point and at its best it exceeded the previous resistance point made on September 24. This means the list reached its highest since the middle of last May. According to the Dow theorists, there has not been as yet a technical indication of a turn in the primary trend. According to this theory, the major trend is still downward. In order to signal a reversal, we would have to have a reaction of around a third to a half of the present rise, and then a violation of the old high on volume.

The above is the technical side of the case. Those who pay no attention to charts and averages are content to look at the situation and see to their satisfaction that there is a growing public interest in securities. There is no question but that the list is honeycombed with stocks, active and inactive that are selling on an extremely conservative basis. The price-earning ratio of these securities indicates that they are cheap, but with a world war, an election and a business boom that is financed in part by Government borrowing, investors are not inclined to mortgage the old homestead and place their all in stock certificates.

Trading today was somewhat smaller than on the run-up of the previous day but the volume of 769,900 shares was satisfactory to the brokerage fraternity. Steels led the rise today, followed closely by securities concerned with the armament program, the better grade rails, motors and metals. Equipments, which had been in the forefront of the advance earlier in the week, were subjected to some profit taking, and store shares were unable to join in today's move. Aviations were firm but made no special demonstration.

New York Central was the day's most active stock and led the rails with another rise, this one amounting to ⅝ point. Pennsylvania gained a similar amount, which placed it little more than a point away from its high for the year and Great Northern preferred closed within an eighth of its high.

Shipping shares were in the limelight, International Mercantile Marine adding a point, which meant about 15 per cent, and New York Shipbuilding advancing 1½. Electric Boat was active and up a major fraction.

Steel, Bethlehem and Republic added good fractions. The Iron Age midweek review of the steel industry reported that the trend of orders is still upward. The publication reported that backlogs are being accumulated and deliveries on a number of products are lengthening.

As on other recent trading days, there was special attention paid to a few inactive preferred issues which investors thought were lagging behind the market. General Steel Castings preferred again was in the limelight, adding 2¾ to make a new high. American Car & Foundry was up about 2 points, also making a new top for this year. Crucible Steel was up 2¼ and the preferred, on a few trades, jumped 8 points. Gains of 1 to 3 points and new highs were rather commonplace among the preferred issues which had not appeared on the tape recently.

Listed bonds continued to move forward briskly today, with foreign dollar obligations joining the movement. Trading amounted to $8,930,000, largely on speculative buying. The rails were again in best demand, and other speculative specialties also improved. The gains in foreign issues were the most substantial in several weeks and represented in part a mere recovery from the deep depression levels of the war. Best-grade bonds of all types were steady to firm.

Japanese issues rallied 2 to 3 point as fears of an immediate outbreak of war in the Pacific waned. Italian bonds showed feeble strength, but some of the German municipal and corporate issues advanced sharply. The Latin-American group contained some firm spots.

It was in domestic rails that the bulk of the bond business was done and these issues moved upward from fractions to 6 points.

Iron and Steel Exports Soar To Record Top

August Shipments, Mostly to Britain, At 1,046,084 Tons

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department said yesterday that August exports of iron and steel were the highest for any month in history.

Shipments, mostly to the United Kingdom, totaled 1,046,084 gross tons, worth $53,870,693. This total compared with 707,809 tons worth $39,511,996 in July and 185,182 tons valued at $12,282,599 in August last year.

The August record climaxed a steady rise throughout the year attributed mostly to British and Canadian purchases. For the first eight months of 1940, exports aggregated 4,524,507 tons, worth $291,352,901, compared with 1,272,055 tons, worth $95,678,644 in the corresponding period of last year.

The United Kingdom took more than half of the August steel exports, buying 653,866 tons, or nearly double July purchases. Canada also nearly doubled its purchases in August when it took 108,017 tons.

Next largest purchaser was Japan with 66,829 tons. Japan's large purchases of American iron and steel scrap are to be shut off by Presidential embargo. The purchases, reported yesterday by the Commerce Department, dealt only with other forms of iron and steel.

Other August purchasers included Argentina, 37,156 tons; South Africa, 22,859 tons; Brazil, 14,443 tons; and the Philippine Islands, 13,175 tons.

By types of iron and steel, August shipments included: non-alloy ingots, blooms, and similar products, 342,641 tons; pig iron 121,948 tons; other non-alloy plate, 75,304 tons; plain structural shapes, 74,330 tons; other non-alloy steel bars, 70,499 tons; and rails weighing in excess of 60 pounds per yard, 70,081.

Interest Unpaid By Italy on Three More Bond Issues

New York, Oct. 2 (AP).—Three more issues were added today to the list of Italian dollar bonds on which interest payments have been defaulted since Italy's entrance into the war.

At the same time a new tangle developed in efforts to clear the status of Dominican Republic obligations held in the United States, when more than $3,000,000 of an issue due in 1940 went unpaid.

Defaulted Italian issues were City of Milan 6½s of 1952, Venetian Mortgage Bank 7s of 1952, and Adriatic Electric Co. 7s of 1952. It was understood Italian exchange authorities offered to supply lire instead of dollars, but such money would be of value chiefly in Italy.

Dollar resources of Italy held in this country are estimated at about $30,000,000. Government figures indicate the Italian dollar debt held in the United States totals $73,600,000.

Annual Gum Output Valued at $60,745,986

American chewing gum factories turned out about 46 cents worth of sticks per capita last year. The census of manufacturers showed that the 26 gum factories turned out $60,745,986 worth of products.

Insurance Firms' Earnings Reflect Interest Rate Dip

Marking the effect of the decline in general interest rates, earnings on the investments of life insurance companies in 1939 were approximately $400,000,000 lower than they would have been had the average interest return for the ten years prior to the depression prevailed, according to the Institute of Life Insurance in its first monthly news bulletin, issued yesterday.

The net interest return last year was approximately 3.8 per cent, while for the ten years prior to 1930 the average return was 5.2 per cent.

The importance of this drop of approximately 26 per cent in the rate of return on insurance company investments to the 64,000,000 policyholders of this country was emphasized by Holgar J. Johnson, president of the institute, who pointed out that the interest rate is one of the most important factors in the c

Listen! with Glynn

Ed East, actor, composer, pianist, singer, master of ceremonies and quizmaster extraordinary—and he's really all of that—brings his 14 years of radio experience and his 265 pounds back to the Columbia network tonight when he becomes the presiding wit on "Ask-It Basket," to be heard over WJSV at 8 o'clock.

C. B. S. listeners have heard a lot of Ed East during the last several years. In 1934 he was introduced to the network by Wally Butterworth of the now famous "Vox Pop" interview team. Later, also on C. B. S., Ed and his partner, Ralph Dumke, conducted an audience participation program called "Meet the Champ"—and a more peculiar bunch of champs you never met. They were also together for years on the "Sisters of the Skillet" program, solving the worries of housewives in a way that has never been approached for sheer lunacy.

Last year Ed was the chief question-and-answer man for the program, "Name It and Take It," heard over another network.

The new "Ask-It Basket" impresario says that one great truth he has learned from his association with quiz programs is that school teachers and professors are the poorest contestants. He thinks the reason is that they're afraid their pupils might be listening in to laugh at their bad guesses.

We're pretty sure you'll like Ed East. He's got an infectiously likeable personality and is genuinely funny.

Triplets Trade in A, B, C Designation For Real Names

Known only as A, B and C for the three days following their birth, the triplet sons born last Saturday night to Mrs. Richard C. White, of Lanham, Md., have finally received names.

A is the senior member of the group. Born at 7:03 p. m., and weighing 3 pounds 7 ounces, he has been officially titled Richard Lee. B weighed 3 pounds 14 ounces at his 7:16 p. m. premiere, and has been named Donald Brooks. His middle name was given in honor of the attending resident physician, Dr. Brooks G. Brown.

Last, but carrying the most weight, is C. Born at 7:23 p. m., he weighed 3 pounds 15 ounces, and is now known as Dennis Warren White.

At George Washington University Hospital, where the three boys were born, it was said yesterday that Mrs. White's condition was good. George C. White, the father, is an electrician employed by the Greyhound Bus Lines.
